NARRATIVE PERSPECTIVE AND IRONY IN SELECTED CHINESE AND AMERICAN FICTION

Ban Wang

Studies in Comparative Literature
Volume 46

The Edwin Mellen Press
Lewiston*Queenston*Lampeter
CONTENTS

Preface i
Acknowledgements v

Introduction: Irony, Ideology, and Multi-Voiced Discourse 1

Chapter 1. Reading for Irony in Classical Chinese Fiction 21
Chapter 2. Irony and Social Criticism in Lu Xun's Fiction 37
Chapter 3. Citation of Discourse and Ironic Debunking in Ah Cheng's Work 49

Chapter 4. Rhetoric of the Absurd: The Grotesque in Yu Hua and Lu Xun 65

Chapter 5. Fiction as Discursive Practice 83

Chapter 6. Plot as a Structure of Meaning and Emotion: The Case of Emma 97

Chapter 7. Narrative Point of View and the Creation of Mystery in Great Expectations 103

Chapter 8. Narrative Stance and the Reader's Response 113

Chapter 9. Self-Irony in First-Person Narrative 121

Chapter 10. Dramatic Irony and Ideological Conflict 129

Chapter 11. Representation of the Psyche and the Modern Novel 139

Notes 157

Bibliography 165

Index 171