Communication Strategies: Psycholinguistic and Sociolinguistic Perspectives

Edited by

Gabriele Kasper
and
Eric Kellerman

LONGMAN
LONDON AND NEW YORK
Contents

Contributors ix

Acknowledgements xi

Introduction: approaches to communication strategies 1
Gabriele Kasper and Eric Kellerman

PART I Psycholinguistic perspectives 15

1 Investigating communication strategies in L2 reference: pros and cons 17
George Yule and Elaine Tarone

2 On psychological plausibility in the study of communication strategies 31
Eric Kellerman and Ellen Bialystok

3 Compensatory strategies and the principles of clarity and economy 49
Nanda Poulisse

4 Preference and order in first and second language referential strategies 65
George Russell

5 Strategies in verbal productions of brain-damaged individuals 96
Brigitte Stemmer and Yves Joanette
PART II  Expanding the scope

6  Developing the ability to evaluate verbal information: the relevance of referential communication research
Peter Lloyd

7  Can one be more than two? Mono- and bilinguals' production of German and Spanish object descriptions in a referential communication task
Werner Deutsch, Nanci Bruhn, Gowert Masche and Heike Behrens

8  'Y ... no puedo decir mas nada': distanced communication skills of Puerto Rican children
Ana Maria Rodino and Catherine E. Snow

9  The lexical generation gap: a connectionist account of circumlocution in Chinese as a second language
Patricia A. Duff

10 An introspective analysis of listener inferencing on a second language listening task
Steven Ross

11 Studying language use as collaboration
Deanna Wilkes-Gibbs

PART III  Sociolinguistic perspectives

12 A sociolinguistic perspective on L2 communication strategies
Ben Rampton

13 Communication strategies in an interactional context: the mutual achievement of comprehension
Jessica Williams, Rebecca Inscoe and Thomas Tasker

14 Communication strategies at work
Johannes Wagner and Alan Firth

15 Beyond reference
Gabriele Kasper

Bibliography

Subject index

Name index