
Farmers & Markets in Tanzania

How Policy Reforms
Affect Rural Livelihoods in Africa

Stefano Ponte

James Currey
Oxford

Mkuki na Nyota
Dar es Salaam

Heinemann
Portsmouth (N.H.)

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
Technical notes	xii
List of acronyms	xiii
List of tables	xv

1

Introduction

Aim of the book	1
The changing role of the state and the emergence of a 'post-adjustment' agenda	2
The politics of reform implementation	4
Policies and livelihoods	6
Epistemological issues	9
Methodology	11
Organisation of the book	13

2

African Agriculture in the Post-Adjustment Era

Introduction	17
African agriculture and changing international markets	18
Agricultural marketing in Africa: from state control to liberalisation	21
Liberalisation of agricultural marketing	22
Food Crops	22
Export Crops	23
Processing and crop quality issues	24
Food Crops	24
Export Crops	25
Input markets and seasonal credit provision	29
The 'Free-Market' System	29
The 'Free-Inputs' System	30
The 'Deduction-at-Source' System	31
The 'Input Trust Fund' System	33
Conclusion	34

3

The Changing Political Economy of Tanzanian Agriculture

Introduction	37
A brief introduction to Tanzanian agriculture	38
Agricultural marketing under colonial rule	40
The early independence period	41
Ujamaa and villagisation	44
The 'crisis' years	47
Conclusion	51

4

Data Politics

Assessing Agricultural Adjustment in Tanzania

Introduction	55
The official discourse on agricultural adjustment in Tanzania	57
Factors Leading to the Crisis	57
The Economic Recovery Programme (1986–9)	58
The Disillusionment of the Early 1990s	61
How is agricultural performance measured?	64
Food Crop Production Figures	65
Export Crop Production Figures	67
Agricultural GDP	68
Conclusion: a 'trade in images'	71

5

State & Market Failures Policy Implications
of Agricultural Input & Credit Liberalisation

Introduction	73
Input pricing and marketing systems in independent Tanzania	75
Input distribution and credit provision in Songea and Morogoro rural districts	77
Background Information on the Two Districts	77
State Failures: Input Distribution under the Co-operative System	81
Market Failures in Input Provision	83
Access to Credit for Input Purchases	85
The impact of agricultural policy reforms on input use	87
Conclusion	92

6

The Local Politics of Reform Implementation

Introduction	95
Assumptions and design	96

Local politics and agricultural market liberalisation in Songea and Morogoro rural districts	99
Case-study 1: The Liberalisation of Food Crop Marketing in Songea	99
Case-study 2: The Liberalisation of Food Crop Marketing in Morogoro	102
Case-study 3: The Liberalisation of Export Crop Marketing in Songea	104
Case-study 4: The Liberalisation of Export Crop Marketing in Morogoro	107
Conclusion	110

7

Fast Crops

Fast Cash

Introduction	113
Changing marketing strategies: from slow to fast cash crops	116
The Baseline: Farmers' Marketing Strategies in the mid-1980s	116
The First Phase of Liberalisation: from 1986/87 to 1990/91	118
The Second Phase of Liberalisation: from 1990/91 to 1994/95	119
The increasing commercialisation of rural life	120
From social negotiation to contract: shifting strategies of farm labour recruitment	123
Impact on farm incomes	128
Conclusion	131

8

Diversification, Poverty & Inequality

Introduction	133
Livelihood diversification	133
Incomes and poverty	140
Quality of life	144
Inequality of livelihoods	151
Age and gender dynamics	155
Conclusion	157

9

Farmers & Markets in Africa

Conclusions & Policy Implications

Introduction	159
A 'post-impasse' political economy	160
Findings and implications of the Tanzania case-study	161
Policy Reforms, Agricultural Performance and Local Politics	161
Farmers' Responses to Liberalisation	162
Diversification, Poverty and Inequality	163
Market liberalisation and African agriculture: outcomes and challenges	164
From theory to practice: policy recommendations	166
Introduction	166

Export Crop Marketing	168
Food Crop Marketing	170
Input Marketing and Credit	171
Diversification	172
Public Institutions, Co-operatives and Farmer Groups	173
Infrastructure and Information Technology	174
Data Collection and Priorities for Future Research	174
Conclusion	175
References	177
Index	198