

Cities and Economic Development

From the Dawn of History

to the Present

Paul Bairoch

Translated by Christopher Braider

Contents

List of Tables	xiii
Introduction	xvii
The Reasons for the Book xviii; The Contents of the Book xix;
Plan of the Book xxi; Acknowledgments xxii

I FROM THE BIRTH OF URBANISM TO THE BEGINNINGS OF THE GREAT CIVILIZATIONS 1

1 The Birth of Urbanism and the Economy 3

The Neolithic Revolution 3; Stages in the Rise of Agriculture 5; Locating the Origins of Urbanization 8; Preurban Towns or Protourbanization 9; The Relations between the Economy and the Birth of Urbanism: Agriculture and Transport 11; The Tyranny of Distance 11; The Impossibility of True Cities before Agriculture 13; Peasants Who Live in Cities 15; What if the City Invented Agriculture? 16

2 The Urban Revolution: Its Beginnings in the Middle East 19

Early Urbanization, Early Agriculture 19; "International Trade" Preceded True Urbanization 20; The First Urbanized Cultures: Density and Size 21; A Dominant Form of Urbanized Culture: City-States 24; From the City-States of Sumer to the Cities of the Egyptian Empire by Way of Babylon 25; Egypt: A Civilization That First Evolved without Cities? 28; The Phoenicians: The First Commercial Towns 29; What Sustained the Commercial Towns of the Ancient World? 31; Israel: Small Towns Inhabited by Peasants and Vine Growers 34; And What of the Other Cultures of the Middle East? 36; The Maghreb: A Delayed Growth of Agriculture and Cities 36

3 The Beginnings of Urbanization in Asia 38

India: the Harappa Civilization as a False Start 39; China: Multiple Centers of Agriculture and Urbanization 42; Japan: A Late but Sudden Urbanization 45; Korea: Essential Borrowings from China 46; The Cities of Southeast Asia: A Diffusion of Indian and Chinese Urban Systems? 47

4 The Beginnings of Urbanization in Black Africa and the New World

52

Black Africa: An Urban History That Remains to be Written 52; The Neolithic Revolution in Black Africa 53; The First Cities of Black Africa 55; The Great Urban Cultures of Black Africa 56; Islam and Urbanization in Black Africa 60; Urbanism in the Pre-Columbian Civilizations 62; The Beginning of Agriculture and Cities in the New World: Were They Invented Here Too? 63; Highly Urbanized Societies in the New World: Were There Any? And If So, How Can They Be Explained? 66; North America: Cultures without Cities 68; And What of the Other Continent? 69

5 Athens and Rome—Two Very Different Civilizations: The Sources of European Urbanization?

71

The Aegean Civilization: Palaces or Towns? 72; Greek Civilization: City-States with Commercial Functions 73; The First Attempts to Determine the Maximum Size of Cities 74; Those "Distant Foreigners" That Cultivated Wheat for Greek Cities 76; Local Economic Functions 77; The Greek Colonies 79; The Etruscan Cities and Rome 80; The Roman Empire: A Dominant Metropolis 81; The Population of the First Great Metropolis, Rome 81; Rome: A Parasitic Capital 83; A Parasitic Metropolis, But an Empire with Many Cities 86; Europe before the Miracle of Greece 87; The Late Urbanization of Non-Romanized Europe 89; A Rough Computation of the Urbanization of Romanized Europe 91

6 The Beginnings of Urbanization: The Relations between Agriculture, Civilization, the Economy, and Cities

93

The Earliness, Multiplicity, and Simultaneity of the Rise of Agriculture 93; The Earliness, Multiplicity, and Simultaneity of the Rise of Cities 94; No Cities without Agriculture, But no Agriculture without Cities 94; Is the City the Characteristic Trait of Humanity? 95; Cities and Civilizations 96; Urbanism and the Economy: The Economically Generative City and the Parasitic City 99; The Case of Greece 100; The Case of Rome 101; Is Generalization Possible? 106

II EUROPE FROM THE FIFTH CENTURY TO THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

107

7 Europe from the Fifth Century to the Tenth Century: A Period of Transition Marked by Declines and Renaissances

109

The Question of Economic Decline in Europe after the Fall of Rome 109; From 500 to 700–800: A Decline in the Population of Europe or Only a Decline in the Population of European Cities? 111; An Urban Decline That Nonetheless Set the Scene for Later Urban Development 114; From 800 to 1000: An Urban Renaissance 116; Muslim Spain: An Urban Culture 118; Christian Europe: An Urban World Reborn Thanks to the Church and Trade 120; The Slavic World: The Birth of the City 122; Bulgaria: A Rival of Byzantium 123

8 Europe from the Eleventh Century to the Eighteenth Century: A Survey of the Economy and Urbanization	124
1000 to 1320—40: A Period of Economic Expansion 124; A Rapid Growth in Population 127; 1300—1340 to 1470—90: The Upheavals of the Period of the Black Death 129; 1470—90 to 1700: An Expansion of Trade in an Otherwise Stagnant Economy 130; Stagnation in Agriculture? 133; Industry: Progress, But No Fundamental Change 134; 900—1000 to 1300—40: A Period of Strong Growth in Urban Population 135; 1340 to 1400—20: A Period of Nongeneralized Urban Recession 139; The Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries: A Shift in the Center of Gravity of Urban Europe 140
9 Cities—Their Locations, Spheres of Influence, Size, and Economic Functions: A Few General Remarks on Matters of Method	142
The Location of Cities 142; From Spheres of Influence to the Urban Hierarchy 144; Is There a Law Governing the Size of Cities? 146; Basic and Nonbasic Functions of Cities 150; Specific Urban Functions 151
10 The Surge of Urban Growth in Medieval Europe	153
Medieval Cities and the Future Urban Structure of Europe 153; A Surge of Urban Growth without Increase in the Level of Urbanization—and Yet . . . 157; The Geographical Component in the Surge of Urban Growth (1000—1300) 158; From the Fortified Castle to the Burg, from the Burg to the New Burg, from the New Burg to the Merchant's Agglomeration, from the Merchant's Agglomeration . . . 161; Small Towns with Highly Local Functions 164; Regional Centers 164; Large Cities 166; Commercial Cities 166; Industrial Cities 167; Administrative Cities 168; Cities and Universities 169; The Medieval City: A School of Democracy? 170; And What of Distant Russia? 170; The Black Death: A Staggering Demographic Catastrophe from Which the Cities Recovered Quickly 172
11 European Cities from the Sixteenth Century to the Eighteenth Century	175
The Break with the Past at the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century 175; A New Surge of Urbanization 176; Urban Growth and the Divisions of Time 177; Urban Growth Resulting from the Rise of the New Commercial Powers 178; A Western Europe Far More Urbanized Than the Rest of the Continent 181; The First Very Great Cities in Europe 183; What Factors Explain the Diversity in the Growth of Cities between 1500 and 1700? 185
12 Urbanization and Development in Europe before the Industrial Revolution: 1000—1700	189
The City: Agent of Civilization 189; The City and Development in Europe from 1000 to 1500 192; The City and Development in Europe from 1500 to 1700 198; What Conclusions Can Be Drawn? 201; But May we Really Speak of Development in Traditional Societies? 202; Splendid but Impoverished Cities 203; And

How Was the Pie Divided? 204; Was There a Specific Urban Demography? 205; A Trend Established Long Ago: People Died Younger in Cities 206; And What of Urban Fertility? 208; A Negative Natural Balance Sheet: The Country Nourished the City with People as Well as with Food 208

III THE ROLE OF THE CITY IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE WESTERN WORLD

13 Urbanism in Developed Countries: 1700–1980

The Eighteenth Century in Europe: Contrasts in Regional Development 214; The Urban Explosion in Nineteenth-Century Europe 216; A Digression: The Criteria Used to Define Urban Population 217; The Twentieth Century: A Variety of Cyclical Patterns 219; The Urbanization of the Rest of the Developed World 221; The Emergence of the Megapolis 223; Large Cities, But No Dramatic Change in the Average Size of Cities 226

14 Urban Demography in Developed Countries from the Eighteenth Century to the Twentieth Century

The City: Graveyard of Babies 229; Lower Life Expectancy in the Cities Even for Adults 233; The Causes of Disproportionately High Mortality Rates in the Urban Environment 236; The Urban Origins of the Second Demographic Revolution 238; The City: A Brake on Its Own Growth 240

15 The City and the First Phases of the Industrial Revolution in England

The Industrial Revolution in England: A Rapid Survey of a Complex Phenomenon 243; Traditional England: An Essentially Rural Country Despite Its Commercial Role 246; London and the English Agricultural Revolution 248; The Place of Urbanization in the Explanations of the Industrial Revolution in England 250; Traditional Cities and the Industrial Revolution 252; The Reasons behind the Lack of a Role for Traditional Cities 256

16 Urbanization and the Diffusion of the Industrial Revolution

Urbanization and Diffusion in Europe 258; Urbanization and Economic Growth 260; Urbanization and Industrialization 262; Instances of Parasitic Urbanization 265; The Persistence of Urban Networks in Countries in Decline: How May It Be Explained? 267

17 Industrialization and the Cities in the Western World in the Nineteenth Century

Industrial Cities Different from Traditional Cities 269; The Human Costs of Urbanization Stemming from Industrialization 271; Human Costs, but Human Benefits as Well 275; Cities near Coalfields 276; The Railroads: New Cities and Giant Cities 277; The Need for Urban Transportation: A Late Development 279; A Glimpse into the History of Urban Transportation 280; The Ability to Build Higher, Thanks to Industry, but the Creation of New Problems as Well 283; Urbanization through Industrialization, Made Possible Only Thanks to Agricultural Progress 287

211

213

228

243

258

269

18 Urbanization in the Developed World in the Nineteenth Century	289
Rapid but Uneven Urbanization 289; The Emergence of New Cities 291; The Urbanization of Europe in the Nineteenth Century 291; The Role of New Nations 293; Russia: A First Surge of Urbanization 294; The Rapid Urbanization of Developed Countries outside Europe 295; The Urbanization of American Society: From Covered Wagons to Station Wagons 296; Agriculture Is Once Again Important 299
19 Urbanization in the Developed World in the Twentieth Century	301
Trends in Urbanization from 1910 to 1980 302; Urbanization in the Thirties: Stabilization in Europe and North America, Expansion in the Soviet Union and Japan 303; 1946–1975: A Genuine Economic Explosion 305; A New Attitude toward the City? 306; Growth and Stagnation of Great Cities 309; The Optimal Size of Cities and the Upper Limits of City Size 310; The New Towns 312; The Automobile and the Breakup of Cities 314; Cities and the Growing Predominance of Services 316; "In the Shadow of the Factories, as Though Nothing Had Happened" 317
20 Technological Innovation and the City	319
Technology, Science, and the Industrial Revolution 320; Technological Innovation and Economic Growth 322; Technological Innovation and the City 323; The City and the Diffusion of Technological Innovations 326; Does the Size of Cities Affect the Diffusion of Technological Innovations? 328
21 Urbanization and Economic Development in Countries Affected by the Industrial Revolution	330
Levels of Urbanization and the Beginnings of the Industrial Revolution 330; Economic Development and Urbanization: Some Close and Obvious Links 333; Urbanization and Economic Development in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries: Some Certainties, but Some Unknowns as Well 335; The City and Innovation 336; Urban Technological Innovations and Agricultural Development 336; The City and the Demand for Agricultural Products 340; The City and Money 341; The City and Social Mobility 341; The City and the Size of the Market for Industrial Goods 342; The Overall Balance Sheet 345
IV URBANISM IN THE THIRD WORLD	347
22 The Cities of Asia: Socioeconomic Systems Different from Those of Europe	349
India: An Apogee of Urban Life under the Mogul Empire 349; China from 200 B.C. to A.D. 1850: An Urban and Economic History Full of Contrasts 352; A High Level of Urbanization by the Twelfth Century 353; Rice: A Factor in Urbanization? 355; A Population Explosion and a Decline in Urbanization: The Absence of an Agricultural Revolution 356; One of the Limits of Traditional Societies 358; Japan: An Urbanized Society 359; Southeast

Asia: The Mediterranean of Asia? 361; The Asiatic Mode of Production and the Cities of Asia 362

23 Urbanism in the Middle East and the Maghreb before the Nineteenth Century 366

Constantinople: A Transition between Christian Europe and the Muslim Middle East 366; Byzantium: Subsistence and the Urban Economy 369; The Cities of the Muslim Worlds 370; Islam and the Diffusion of Urbanism 371; Islam: Economy, Technology, and Urbanization 374; The Specific Features of Muslim Cities 375; The Camel: A Technological Advance over the Wheel? 376; The Ottoman Empire: An Expanding Metropolis with Cities in Decline at the Periphery? 378

24 Traditional Colonization and Urbanization: From 1490–1530 to 1780–1815 382

The Break with the Past Brought About by the Industrial Revolution 382; From the Pre-Columbian New World to Latin America: A Radical Modification in the Ethnic Composition of the Population 383; A Colonization with an Urbanizing Character 385; An Urban Network without Strong Links to the Past 385; Towns Based on Mining and the Export of Tropical Products 386; Black Africa: Small European Enclaves 390; The Other Flow of Slaves 392; An Exception: Two Small Islands both Colonized and Urbanized by Europe 392; Colonization in Black Africa as a Whole: Little Influence on Urbanization 393; Asia: A Very Marginal European Presence 394

25 Modern Colonization and Urbanization in Asia and the Maghreb from 1780/1815 to 1930/40 397

Asia: The Impact of Deindustrialization and Colonization 398; A Decline in Traditional Cities Offset by the Rapid Growth of Export Towns: The Case of India 399; A Steep Decline in the Standard of Living for City Residents 401; China: A Process of Semicolonization Engrafted upon a Negative Phase of Urbanization 402; And What of the Rest of Asia? 404; Indonesia and Southeast Asia 405; The Colonization of Asia: A Factor in Its Urbanization? 406; The Maghreb: Colonization by Settlement 408; Colonization with Urban Growth 409; Cotton and Urbanization in Egypt 410

26 Modern Colonization and Urbanization in Black Africa and Latin America from 1780/1815 to 1930/40 412

Black Africa: From the End of the Slave Trade to Colonial Exploitation 412; A First Local Outbreak of the General Colonization Process: The Sugar-Producing Islands 414; Black Africa: Colonization and Urbanization 416; Latin America: The Time of Catastrophes and the Time of Growth 418; Industrialization and Urbanization 420; Latin America at the End of the Nineteenth Century: A Prefiguration of the Third World in the Second Half of the Twentieth Century 422; Can the Urban Expansion of the Third World during the Nineteenth Century Be Explained by a More Equal Income Distribution? 425

27	The Urban^p Explosion in the Third World during the Twentieth Century	427
	Different Starting Points, but a Convergent Evolution 429; China: A Succession of Urban Policies 432; China after Mao: A New Urban Policy? 434; The Concentration of Population in Very Large Cities in the Third World 436; Very Little Evolution against the Trend 440
28	The Causes of the Urban Explosion in the Third World	442
	An Extremely High Density of Agricultural Population 442; A Large Difference between Urban and Rural Income 444; Get an Education and Move to the City 447; The City in the Third World: From High Mortality Rates to Rapid Natural Growth 448; Death in the City 448; Births in the City 452; One of the Causes of the Urban Explosion: The Natural Growth of Population 453; More Factors Contributing to the Urban Explosion 453; If So Many Faults, Why No Greater Damage? 456
29	The Consequences of the Urban Explosion in the Third World	457
	Urbanization without Economic Development 457; Urbanization without Industrialization 460; A Paradox: Urban Expansion without an Increase in Agricultural Productivity 462; An Inescapable Consequence: A Dramatic Shortfall in Urban Employment 464; Romes without Empires 466; Urban Unemployment in China 467; Hypertrophy in the Tertiary Sector 468; The Informal Sector: The Shadowy Frontiers of a Vast Domain 469; Shantytowns: A Major Form of Habitat 471
30	Urbanization and Economic Development in the Third World	475
	Urbanization and Development in the Traditional Societies of the Future Third World: Some Uncertainties 475; Colonial Cities and Development: A Reinforcement of the Negative Effects of Colonization 477; The Case of Latin America 479; Urbanization and Economic Development in the Third World 480; Underdevelopment and the Traditionally Positive Aspects of Urbanization 481; Hyperurbanization and Development 484; Are the Handicaps Also Opportunities? 486; The Informal Sector: An Economic Asset or Disguised Unemployment? 486; The Shantytowns: Slums of Hope or Tumors to Be Removed? 488; The City a Handicap? Agriculture a Solution? 489
31	Conclusions	493
	A World Highly Urbanized Very Early 494; An Urban World: Sources of Instability and Sources of Stability 496; The City, for Better or for Worse 496; Traditional Cities and the Limits of Agriculture 497; Traditional Cities and Economic Development 499; The Break with the Past Caused by the Industrial Revolution 500; A Break with the Past That Began in England 503; An Increased Role for the City in Development 504; The City, the Country, and Death: An Industrial Revolution That for a Long Time Did Not

Change the Essentials 505; European Colonization and the City 506; The City: An Ally of Colonization? 508; An Urban Explosion Unprecedented in Both Its Scale and Its Modalities 509; The Consequences of the Urban Explosion 510; The City in the Third World: The Loss of Its Functions as a Factor in Development 511; And What Will Tomorrow Bring? 512

Appendix: Methodology and Sources 519

1. General Approach 519; 2. Cities: Their Number and Population 520; 3. Estimates of Urban Populations 523; 4. Total Population 523; 5. Margins of Error in the Figures for Urban Population 524

Classified Bibliography 527

References 541

Index 563