1	Meaning in the empirical study of language	1
	Chapter preview	1
1.0	What is semantics?	2
1.1	Meaning, communication and significance	3
1.2	Talking about meaning in English and other languages	6
1.2.1	'Meaning' in English	7
1.2.2	'Meaning' in Warlpiri	9
1.2.3	'Meaning' in French	10
1.2.4	'Meaning' in Chinese	11
1.3	The semiotic triangle: language, mind, world and meaning	13
1.4	Some initial concepts	16
1.4.1	Lexemes	16
1.4.2	Sense/reference/denotation/connotation	17
1.4.3	Compositionality	19
1.4.4	Levels of meaning	21
1.5	Object language and metalanguage	22
1.6	Breaking the circle	24
1.6.1	Meanings as referents/denotations	25
1.6.2	Meanings as concepts/mental representations	27
1.6.3	Meanings as brain states	32
1.6.4	Meaning and use	36
1.7	Meaning and explanation	38

2	Meaning and definition	45
	Chapter preview	45
2.1	Meaning and the dictionary	46
2.1.1	Semantics and lexicography	46
2.2	The units of meaning	50
2.2.1	Words and morphemes	50
2.2.2	Meanings below the morpheme: sound symbolism	54
2.2.3	Meanings above the word level: idioms	56
2.2.4	Contextual modulation of meaning	57
2.3	Different ways of defining meanings	62
2.3.1	Real and nominal definition	62
2.3.2	Definition by ostension	65
2.3.3	Definition by synonymy	66
2.3.4	Definition by context or typical exemplar	66
2.3.5	Definition by genus and differentia	67

2.4	Definition and substitutability,	69
2.5	Semantic primitives	70
2.6	Problems with definitions	76
2.7	Definition, understanding and use	79
	Summary	80
	Further reading	81
	Exercises	82
3	The scope of meaning I: external context	87
	Chapter preview	87
3.1	Meaning and context	88
3.2	External context: sense and reference	90
	3.2.1 The Fregean distinction	90
	3.2.2 The sense/reference distinction and linguistic description	94
	3.2.3 Deixis	98
3.3	Dictionary and encyclopaedia	100
	3.3.1 Knowledge of meaning and knowledge of facts	100
	3.3.2 Problems with the dictionary–encyclopaedia distinction	103
	Summary	105
	Further reading	106
	Exercises	106
4	The scope of meaning II: interpersonal context	107
	Chapter preview	107
4.1	Interpersonal context: illocutionary force and speech acts	108
	4.1.1 Locutionary, illocutionary and perlocutionary acts	109
	4.1.2 Consequences of the illocutionary perspective	111
4.2	Interpersonal context: speaker's intention and hearer's inference	113
4.3	Interpersonal context: implicature	116
	4.3.1 Discrepancies between truth-functional meaning and utterance meaning	116
	4.3.2 Conventional and conversational implicature	118
4.4	Gricean maxims and the Cooperative Principle	119
	4.4.1 Infringing the maxims	120
	4.4.2 Questions about implicatures	121
4.5	Are the maxims universal?	122
4.6	Relevance theory	124
4.7	Semantics and pragmatics	129
	Summary	131
	Further reading	132

5	Analysing and distinguishing meanings	135
	Chapter preview	135
5.1	Lexical relations	136
	5.1.1 Antonymy	137
	5.1.2 Meronymy	140

5.1.3 Hyponymy	142
5.1.4 Taxonomy	146
5.1.5 Synonymy	150
5.2 Componential analysis	154
5.3 Polysemy and meaning division	160
5.3.1 Polysemy, monosemy and homonymy	161
5.3.2 Tests for polysemy	162
5.3.3 Polysemy and monosemy as a cline	167
Summary	169
Further reading	170

6 Logic as a representation of meaning	173
Chapter preview	173
6.1 Validity, soundness and logical form	174
6.2 Propositional logic	178
6.3 Logic as representation and perfection of meaning	186
6.4 Predicate logic	189
6.5 Truth, models and extension	196
6.6 Relations between propositions	201
6.6.1 Entailment	201
6.6.2 Presupposition	203
6.6.3 Contradictories, contraries and subcontraries	204
6.7 Meaning postulates	209
6.8 Definite descriptions	213
6.9 Logic and language	215
Summary	216

7 Meaning and cognition I: categorization and cognitive semantics	223
Chapter preview	223
7.1 The semantics of categorization	224
7.1.1 Classical categorization	224
7.1.2 Problems with classical categories	225
7.1.3 Prototype categorization	228
7.1.4 Problems with prototype categories	233
7.2 Language and conceptualization: cognitive approaches to semantics	238
7.2.1 Commitments of cognitive semantics	238
7.2.2 Idealized cognitive models	240
7.2.3 Embodiment and image schemas	241
7.2.4 Metaphor and metonymy	246
7.2.5 Radial categories in word meaning	250
7.2.6 Problems with cognitive semantics	254
Summary	256

Exercises	258

8	Meaning and cognition II: formalizing and simulating conceptual representations	261
	Chapter preview	261
	8.1 Conceptual semantics	262
	8.1.1 Concepts and decomposition	262
	8.1.2 Developing conceptual semantics analyses	265
	8.1.3 Problems with conceptual semantics	269
	8.2 Semantics and computation	270
	8.2.1 The lexicon in computational linguistics	272
	8.2.2 Word sense disambiguation	277
	8.2.3 Pustejovskian semantics	280
	Summary	283
	Further reading	284
	Exercises	285
9	Meaning and morphosyntax I: the semantics of grammatical categories	287
	Chapter preview	287
	9.1 The semantics of parts of speech	288
	9.1.1 Variation in parts of speech systems	289
	9.1.2 How are parts of speech delimited?	290
	9.1.3 Grammatical category and discourse function	304
	9.2 The semantics of tense and aspect	308
	9.2.1 Tense	308
	9.2.2 Aspect and Aktionsart	314
	9.2.3 Typology of tense–aspect interactions	329
	Summary	330
	Further reading	332
	Exercises	332
10	Meaning and morphosyntax II: verb meaning and argument structure	335
	Chapter preview	335
	10.1 Verbs and participants	336
	10.1.1 The traditional picture: thematic roles	337
	10.1.2 Problems with thematic roles	341
	10.1.3 Proto-roles	344
	10.1.4 Thematic relations and conceptual structure	348
	10.2 Verb classes and alternations	352
	10.3 The meaning of constructions	359
	Summary	365
	Further reading	366
	Exercises	366

11	Semantic variation and change	369
	Chapter preview	369
11.1	Sense, reference and metalanguage in semantic comparisons	370
11.2	Semantic change	372
11.2.1	The traditional categories	373
11.2.2	Mechanisms and pathways of semantic change	377
11.2.3	Grammaticalization	384
11.3	Meaning through corpora	386
11.4	Semantic typology	390
11.4.1	Body parts	390
11.4.2	Colour vocabulary	392
11.4.3	Deictic motion	399
11.4.4	Lexicalization patterns in motion verbs	400
11.4.5	Spatial reference	407
11.5	Language and thought	411
