

Mainstream Culture Refocused

Television Drama, Society, and the Production of Meaning in Reform-Era China

ZHONG XUEPING

University of Hawai'i Press
Honolulu

Contents

- ix Acknowledgments

INTRODUCTION

- 1 Mainstream Culture Refocused: Toward an Understanding of Chinese Television Drama

CHAPTER ONE

- 28 Looking through the Negatives: Filmic-Televisual Intertextuality and Ideological Renegotiations

CHAPTER TWO

- 47 Re-collecting "History" on Television: "Emperor Dramas," National Identity, and the Question of Historical Consciousness

CHAPTER THREE

- 73 In Whose Name? "Anticorruption Dramas" and Their Ideological Implications

CHAPTER FOUR

- 97 Beyond Romance: "Youth Drama," Social Change, and the Postrévolution Search for Idealism

CHAPTER FIVE

- 123 Also beyond Romance: Women, Desire, and the Ideology of Happiness in "Family-Marriage Drama"

CHAPTER SIX

- 144 Listening to Popular Poetics: Watching Songs Composed for Television Dramas

viii : CONTENTS

- 162 Epilogue: Intellectuals, Mainstream Culture, and Social Transformation
- 165 Notes
- 193 Glossary
- 197 Filmography
- 201 Bibliography
- 215 Index