

Arab and African Film Making

Lizbeth Malkmus and Roy Armes

Zed Books Ltd
London and New Jersey

Contents

Acknowledgements	vi
Introduction	vii
PART ONE : CONTEXT	1
1. Cinema Under Colonialism	3
The advent of the cinema	3
The other new media	7
European filming and recording	12
European fictional approaches	16
The colonial film units	19
Indigenous culture under colonialism	22
African and Arab literature	25
The beginnings of Arab film-making	28
Developments in popular music	32
Conclusion	34
2. Cinema After Independence	36
Introduction: national identity	36
Film and literature	38
Film and popular music	44
Film and broadcasting	47
Film and the state	50
Contexts of production	55
The individual film-maker	59
PART TWO : ARAB FILM	63
3. The Epic	65
Heroes	65
Marginals	68
Heroines	70
Violence	73
Sport	74

	Anti-hero/ine	75
	Anti-epic	77
	Sample film: Omar Gatlato	79
	Conclusion	81
4.	The Comic	83
	Gags	83
	Situations	87
	Analogies	90
	Derision	91
	Sample comedy: Four on an Important Mission	92
	Conclusion	94
5.	The Dramatic	96
	Melodrama	96
	Futuwwa	101
	Dissolution	102
	Sample drama: Cairo: Central Station	108
	Conclusion	110
6.	Scene	112
	Data	112
	Prescription/description	114
	Metonymy and Metaphor	117
	Egyptian realism old and new	120
	Camera	124
	Sample film: Save What We Can	125
	Conclusion	127
7.	Sound	129
	Functions	129
	Tensions	133
	Performance	136
	Voice	140
	Sample film: Events of the Coming Year	143
	Conclusion	145
8.	Sign	148
	Madness	149
	Myth	151
	Memory	154
	Figures	156
	Tableaux	160
	Sample film: The Drifters	161

Conclusion	162
PART THREE : AFRICAN FILM	167
9. Voice	169
Voices off	170
Narrative voices	177
10. Space	185
The organizing eye	186
The politics of space	192
11. Story	201
Structural principles	202
The individual and the group	210
DOCUMENTATION	217
Dictionary of Film-makers	217
Notes	237
Bibliography	246
Index	259