

EXPANDING CLASS

Power and Everyday Politics in Industrial

Communities, The Netherlands, 1850 – 1950

Don Kalb

Duke University Press

Durham and London

1997

Contents

Preface vii

Introduction 1

PART ONE The Limits of Dominance and Deference: Power and Culture in Shoemaking Villages, 1900–1920 35

1 Communal Commotion: The Complexities of the Shoemakers Conflict in 1910 37

2 Solidary Logic or Civilizing Process? Workers, Priests, and Alcohol in Shoemaking Villages 60

PART TWO The Enigma of Philipsism: Family and Acquiescence in an Electrical Boomtown, 1850–1950 79

3 Eindhoven and Its Context 81

4 The Making of a Flexible Industrial Territory 93

5 Cycles and Structures of Electrical Production, 1910–1930 139

6 The Culture of Philipsism 153

7 The Fruits of Flexible Familism 213

8 A Dumb Girl and an Epileptic Bricoleur: Clues on Culture and Class in Popular Memory and Narration 234

Epilogue: Pathways to Labor-Intensive Manufacturing 259

Notes 281

References 317

Index 333