

EDUCATION AND NATION BUILDING IN KENYA

Perspectives on Modernization
Global Dependency and
Local Development Alternatives

Anders Närman
Kulturgeografiska Institutionen
Göteborgs Universitet

Göteborg 1995

Department of Human and Economic Geography
Göteborg University
S- 411 80 GÖTEBORG
Sweden

CONTENTS

1. DEVELOPMENT - SOME PERSONAL REFLECTIONS	1
1.1 The development discourse - from the simple to the complex	1
1.2 A central theme in the development discourse - inequality	3
1.3 Eurocentricism or an alternative development concept?	4
1.4 Towards an actor-oriented development research methodology	6
1.5 An outline of the thesis	8
 2. DEVELOPMENT AND GEOGRAPHY	 11
2.1 Some development tendencies and basic terminology	12
2.2 Development on a global level	16
2.2.1 Theoretical considerations - the schools of dependency	16
2.2.2 Actors and policies at the global level	19
2.3 National development	23
2.3.1 Theoretical considerations - modernization	23
2.3.2 National actors in development	27
2.4 The local scene	30
2.4.1 Theoretical discussion - alternative development	30
2.4.2 Local actors	32
2.5 From the local to the global - a synthesis	36
2.6 Aims and objectives of the thesis	41
 3. METHODOLOGICAL CONSIDERATIONS	 45
3.1 Research issues	45
3.2 Some aspects on qualitative research	49
3.3 Insiders - outsiders	52
3.4 The learning process in African society	55
3.5 Concluding remarks - method and issues	57
 4. EDUCATION AND AFRICAN DEVELOPMENT	 61
4.1 The role of education in development	62
4.2 The state of affairs - African education	65
4.3 Actors and policies in education	69
4.3.1 The Global level	69
4.3.2 The National level	70
4.3.3 Local initiatives in education	72
4.4 Some issues in educational planning	73
4.4.1 Internal efficiency	74
4.4.2 External efficiency - education and the labour market	75
4.4.4 Inequality in education	80
4.5 Concluding remarks	83

5. KENYA - A NATION STATE?	85
5.1 Basic features - land and people	85
5.1.1 Urbanization	89
5.1.2 Ethnic division	90
5.1.3 Administrative division	93
5.2 The historical background	97
5.2.1 The pre-colonial and colonial melting pot	97
5.2.2 The political struggle for Independence	99
5.2.3 Political Independence	101
5.3 Economic development	103
5.3.1 The colonial economy	103
5.3.2 Economic policies after Independence	104
5.4 Concluding remarks	120
 6. KENYA - A STATE OF NATIONS	 123
6.1 Regions and ethnicity	124
6.1.1 Historical background	126
6.1.2 Ethnicity after Independence	128
6.2 Regional policies	131
6.3 Some trends in regional development	133
6.4 A district comparison on resource base	137
6.4.1 Nairobi and Mombasa - a tribal mix	137
6.4.2 Kikuyu-land	139
6.4.3 Other central Bantu - Kamba, Meru and Embu	143
6.4.4 Areas with a mainly Kalenjin population	146
6.4.5 Western Kenya - the home of Luo, Luhya and Kisii	147
6.4.6 Coastal region	150
6.4.7 Kajiado and Narok - the Masai home lands	151
6.4.8 The arid and semi-arid pastoralist lands	152
6.5 Concluding analysis - land and people	153
 7. EDUCATION IN KENYA	 157
7.1 Colonial education	158
7.1.1 The quantitative expansion	159
7.1.2 The purpose of education	159
7.1.3 The financing of education	161
7.1.4 Inequality in education	162
7.1.5 Some concluding remarks on colonial education	163
7.2 Education in independent Kenya	163
7.2.1 Primary education	165
7.2.2 Secondary education	168
7.3 Formal education and the labour market	177
7.4 Concluding remarks	178

8. EDUCATION AND NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT	181
8.1 National educational development as described in official publications	182
8.2 Some aspects from the debate on educational equality	185
8.3 Regional variations in educational standards	186
8.4 Distribution of secondary education facilities regionally	192
8.4.1 Increase in number of schools	192
8.4.2 Secondary school enrolment	195
8.4.3 Provision of secondary school teachers	202
8.5 Summary -regional educational structure	209
8.5.1 The urban core - Nairobi and Mombasa	209
8.5.2 Kikuyu-land	209
8.5.3 Other central Bantu - Kamba, Meru and Embu	210
8.5.4 Areas with a primarily Kalenjin population	211
8.5.5 Western Kenya - the home of Luo, Luhya and Kisii	212
8.5.6 The coastal region	212
8.5.7 Kajiado and Narok - the Masai homelands	212
8.5.8 The arid and semi-arid pastoralist lands	213
8.6 Concluding remarks	213
 9. CASE STUDY 1 - KENYA SCIENCE TEACHERS' COLLEGE	 217
9.1 Method and material used	217
9.2 KSTC - some background data	219
9.3 KSTC graduates 1968 - 83	220
9.3.1 Some basic facts	220
9.3.2 Secondary school background	222
9.3.3 Home districts	223
9.3.4 Tribal background	225
9.3.5 After KSTC - what?	226
9.4 Concluding remarks	237
 10. CASE STUDY 2 - DIVERSIFIED SECONDARY EDUCATION	 239
10.1 Methods and material used	239
10.2 Diversified secondary education - a brief	240
10.3 Tribal background and home district	243
10.4 A brief comment on education and the labour market	252
10.5 Concluding remarks	256
 11. A REFLECTIVE ANALYSIS	 259
11.1 A summary as a beginning	259
11.2 Relations between the local and the global	269
11.3 Implications for development research	272
 BIBLIOGRAPHY	 275