
Japan's Response to the
Gorbachev Era, 1985–1991

A RISING SUPERPOWER
VIEWS A DECLINING ONE

Gilbert Rozman

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY

Contents

Preface	vii
Chronology	ix
PART ONE: The Contemporary Background
CHAPTER ONE The Japanese Worldview	3
CHAPTER TWO The Foreign Policy Establishment	20
CHAPTER THREE The Spectrum of Political Debate	44
CHAPTER FOUR The Information Society	57
PART TWO: A Chronology of Changing Perceptions
CHAPTER FIVE The Historical Background	73
CHAPTER SIX The First Cycle, 1985–1987	98
CHAPTER SEVEN The Second Cycle, 1987–1989	108
CHAPTER EIGHT The Third Cycle, 1989–1991	136
PART THREE: The Building Blocks for Perceptions
CHAPTER NINE Views of the Russian Heritage	173
CHAPTER TEN Views of Soviet Development	187
CHAPTER ELEVEN Views of Soviet Society	209

CHAPTER TWELVE

Views of Soviet Politics and New Thinking

Mayumi Itoh

224

PART FOUR: The Soviet Debate and Japan's Future

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Patterns of Perceptions

245

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Strategy toward the Soviet Union

271

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

An Early Look at the Japanese Superpower

303

Epilogue

330

Notes

335

Index

365