

Pacific Islands Monograph Series, No. 3

Wealth of the Solomons

*A history of a
Pacific archipelago, 1800–1978*

JUDITH A. BENNETT

*Pacific Islands Studies Program
Center for Asian and Pacific Studies
University of Hawaii*
UNIVERSITY OF HAWAII PRESS • Honolulu

CONTENTS

Figures	xiii
Photos	xiv
Tables	xv
Preface	xvii
Acknowledgments	xxiii
Measurements and Spelling	xxvii
1 The Solomon Islands in 1800	1
Land, sea, and people	1
Production, exchange, and social organization	10
Political organization	14
Religion	16
Other worlds	19
2 The ship men (c.1800–1860)	21
First contact	22
Whaling: The beginning of long-distance trade	24
Technological innovation and consequences	33
Introduced diseases and ideas	38
Necessities and luxuries	42
3 The traders and their masters (c.1860–1900)	45
The growth of long-distance trade	46
Traders and backers	49
Profits and losses	53
Of motives and men	58
The price of survival	60
Men in the middle	72
4 The attractions of trade (c.1860–1900)	78
The trading relationship: The Melanesians	79
The penetration of Western goods	82
Western trade and Solomon Islands economies	83
Western trade and Solomon Islands politics	87
Satisfying new needs, modifying old skills	93

5	The colonial government and pacification (c.1896–1920)	103
	The protectorate established	104
	Methods of pacification	106
	The effects of pacification	112
	Selling a birthright	115
	The last frontier: Conquered yet entire	120
6	The colonial government and land alienation (c.1900–1920)	125
	Commercial infrastructure	126
	The “waste lands”	127
	The promise of the Solomons	138
	Freehold land and the traders	139
	The landlord government and the leasehold system	146
7	The colonial government and labor (c.1900–1930)	150
	The Colonial Office and labor policy	151
	The protectorate government and labor	153
	Wage policy	160
	The continuing labor crisis—the search for solutions	164
8	The plantation (c.1900–1930)	167
	Motives for recruiting for plantations	168
	Laborers’ input into labor policy and practice	169
	Life on the plantation	171
	The planters	178
	The plantation economy—opportunities and limitations	185
9	Producers and consumers (c.1900–1930)	192
	Incentives to local producers	193
	The effects of World War I on Solomon Islander producers and consumers	198
	Barriers to greater Solomon Islander participation in the cash economy	201
	Enter the Chinese	206
	The blessing of settled government	210
	Producers and consumers and capitalism	212
	Political correlates of socioeconomic change	215
10	Weathering the storm (c.1930–1942)	218
	“King Copra”	219
	The Depression and the plantation system	220
	The merchant companies foreclose	223
	The Depression and the big plantation companies	225
	Competition and new directions	229
	Adjusting to the impossible	230
	The Colonial Office and the future of the Solomons	236

11	A rumor of utopia: The western and central Solomons (c.1930–1942)	241
	The Depression and local producers	242
	The Gizo district—resistance and reorganization	243
	The tax “revolt”	246
	Beyond the Gizo district	249
	Local traders, storekeepers, and capitalism	252
	Hopes postponed	258
	The central Solomons and the “Chair and Rule” movement	259
12	More rumors: The eastern Solomons (c.1930–1942)	265
	A just tax: The path not taken	266
	Malaita and commerce during the Depression	267
	Beyond Malaita	269
	Problems and attempted solutions	272
	The spirits, America, and new hope	278
	Institutionalizing unrest: Reconciling “custom” and introduced law	280
13	World War II and aftermath (c.1942–1955)	285
	War and the Solomon Islanders	286
	From the chaos of war: Maasina Rule	292
	The protectorate government: Response, repression, and rapprochement	293
	Maasina Rule: A popular political movement	297
	The Society for the Development of Native Races—western Guadalcanal	299
	The western Solomons and the Christian Fellowship Church	299
	“Patching up a frayed edge of Empire”: 1943–1955	301
14	Independence: Coming, ready or not! (1955–1978)	311
	Paternalistic policies for progress, 1955–1965	312
	Rapid constitutional and political change, 1965–1978	318
	Developments at the local level: Devolution and its cost	325
	The western Solomons “breakaway”	327
	The economy: Limitations, frustrations, and old values	330
	The people—change and continuity	336
	Epilogue	344
	Appendixes
1	Whaling contacts and sightings, c. 1800–1890	350
2	Castaways, deserters, and runaway convicts in the Solomon Islands, c. 1820–1870	356
3	Items of trade, where mentioned, of whaling ships and other non-trading vessels, 1798–1860	358

4 Exports and shipping from Solomon Islands to port of Sydney, c. 1854–1896	362
5 Location of resident traders and non-Melanesian staff, c. 1860–1900	376
6 Violent conflicts between Solomon Islanders and Europeans engaged in trading, c. 1860–1896	390
7 Resident commissioners and district officers before World War II	397
8 Petitions to Resident Commissioner, 1912	405
Abbreviations	411
Notes	415
Bibliography	467
Informants	501
General Index	505
Index of Ships	527