

Geographic Perspectives on Soviet Central Asia

Edited by Robert A. Lewis

Cartography by Robert R. Churchill and Amanda Tate

London and New York

Contents

List of Tables	xiii
List of Maps and Figures	xvii

Part I

Introduction

1 Introduction Robert A. Lewis	3
Conclusions and implications	9
References	16

Part II

Regional Background

2 The Frontier and Colonialism in Russian and Soviet Central Asia Ralph S. Clem	19
Frontiers, colonies, and multiethnic states	20
Frontier expansion and colonialism in Russian Central Asia	26
The Russian experience in Central Asia in comparative perspective	33
References	34
3 The Political Geography of Soviet Central Asia: Integrating the Central Asian Frontier Lee Schwartz	37
Introduction	37
Political integration of the Central Asian periphery	39
Historical political geography of Soviet Central Asia	40
Central Asia as a unified region: consolidating the frontier	44
The nature of Soviet federalism: the political structure	49
Local political geography: administrative reorganization and political representation	57
Integrating the Central Asian frontier: different perspectives	66
Notes	67
References and bibliography	69
4 The Physical Geography of Soviet Central Asia and the Aral Sea Problem Peter Sinnott	74
Introduction	74
Climate	76

Mountains	78
Deserts	81
Water resources	82
Irrigation agriculture and regional development	84
River diversion schemes	84
The Aral Sea	85
Choices for the Aral Sea	91
Conclusion	94
References and bibliography	96

Part III

Economic Geography

5 Soviet Geographical Imbalances and Soviet Central Asia
Ronald D. Liebowitz	101
Introduction	101
The geographical imbalance	101
Constraints to a solution	104
Solutions and some problems	111
Trends in capital allocations	114
Conclusion	122
Notes	126
References	128
6 Agricultural Change, Labor Supply, and Rural Out-Migration in Soviet Central Asia Peter R. Craumer	132
Overview of Central Asian agriculture	133
Irrigation and water resources	135
Land use and the cotton economy	141
Population growth and Central Asian agriculture	148
Personal agricultural plots and rural incomes	167
Conclusion	171
References	174
7 Work Force Composition, Patriarchy, and Social Change
Michael Paul Sacks	181
Less development or stifled development?	181
Occupational distribution as an indicator	185
Ethnic and gender differences	189
Weavers, salespeople, cleaners, and teachers	192
Recent data on ethnic composition	194
The geography of gender differences	197
Problems of preserving patriarchy	199
The dilemma of Turkic-Muslim men	201
Conclusion	203
Notes	204
References	205

Part IV*Social Geography

8	The Demography of Soviet Central Asia and its Future Development	Ozod B. Ata-Mirzayev and Abdukhakim A. Kayumov	211
	References		221
9	Demographic Trends in Soviet Central Asia and Southern Kazakhstan	Richard H. Rowland	222
	Data sources, regional definition, and procedures		222
	Population growth and share of USSR population		223
	Fertility, mortality, age composition, and migration		225
	Population distribution, redistribution, and growth		230
	Urbanization and urban-rural population change		234
	Summary and conclusions		238
	Implications and future prospects		239
	Notes		246
	References		248
10	Social Mobilization in Soviet Central Asia	Robert J. Kaiser	251
	Introduction		251
	Measuring social mobilization		253
	Education and social mobilization		254
	Russian bilingualism as sociocultural adaptation		260
	Workplace mobility		266
	Implications		275
	Notes		276
	References		277
11	Nations and Homelands in Soviet Central Asia		279
	Robert J. Kaiser		279
	Introduction		279
	Of homelands and national territoriality		280
	The national question in Soviet Central Asia		282
	National identity in Soviet Central Asia		284
	The nations of Soviet Central Asia		288
	The homeland factor in international integration		294
	International marriage patterns		299
	National territoriality and "natural" assimilation		302
	Conclusions		303
	Appendix: The nations of Central Asia and affiliated subnational groups		306
	Notes		308
	References		309

Tables

3.1	Indigenous Soviet Central Asian nationalities living in countries bordering the "southern tier."	48
3.2	Changing rates in Communist Party membership in Soviet Central Asia.	52
3.3	Percentage increase in Communist Party membership for indigenous and other nationalities living in Central Asia.	54
3.4	Major political subdivisions, dates of formation, and changes: Central Asian republics.	58
3.5	Changes in the numbers of political subdivisions: union republics of Soviet Central Asia	59
3.6	Changes in the areas of Central Asian jurisdictions.	60
3.7	Internal political-administrative reorganization: major oblast area transfers and changes.	62
3.8	Recent territorial consolidation.	64
4.1	Inflow into the Aral Sea.	87
5.1	Work force by sector.	112
5.2	Percentage of titular nationalities engaged in agriculture and industry.	113
5.3	Per worker investment allocations.	115
5.4	Per capita investments.	115
5.5	Share of all-union capital investments.	116
5.6	Relative oblast-level per capita investments.	117
5.7	Industrial investment.	118
5.8	Productive investment.	119
5.9	Per capita retail trade.	120
5.10	Urban and rural per capita retail trade.	121
5.11	Percentage of republican jobs in industry and agriculture held by titular nationalities.	122
6.1	Area of irrigated land.	136
6.2	Area of new irrigated land.	136
6.3	Area of irrigated lands by level of salinization.	140
6.4	All sown area.	142
6.5	Grain sowings.	143
6.6	Cotton sowings.	144
6.7	Cotton yields.	145
6.8	Rural population.	149
6.9	Rural population growth rates.	151

6.10	Growth in rural working-age population.	153
6.11	Workers in agriculture (average yearly number).	154
6.12	Agricultural workers (percentage of rural working-age population).	155
6.13	Sown area per kolkhoz and sovkhos worker.	156
6.14	Rate of growth in agricultural labor productivity.	158
6.15	Labor expenditure per centner of raw cotton.	159
6.16	Percentage of cotton harvested by machine.	161
6.17	Number of cotton harvest machines.	161
6.18	Agricultural wages.	164
6.19	Net rural out-migration as a percentage of natural increase.	166
6.20	Indicators of private plot production.	169
7.1	Indexed wages of workers and employees by selected branches.	188
7.2	Selected data on occupations with a large number of males.	191
7.3	Russian and Uzbek male representation in selected branches of the economy of Tashkent.	195
7.4	Titular ethnic group representation among workers and employees by branch of the economy.	196
7.5	Percentage female by branch for urban and rural areas.	198
7.6	Percentage urban by branch for males and females.	198
8.1	Population change.	212
8.2	Age-specific birth rates.	214
8.3	Birth, death, and natural increase rates.	215
8.4	Marriage rates.	216
8.5	Marriage and divorce rates.	217
8.6	Divorce rates.	217
8.7	Urban population change.	218
8.8	Urbanization.	219
8.9	Rural population change.	220
9.1	Total population change.	224
9.2	Crude birth, death, and natural increase rates.	226
9.3	Total fertility rates by republic.	226
9.4	Net migration.	229
9.5	Total population growth, distribution, and redistribution.	233
9.6	Crude birth, death, and natural increase rates by republic.	234
9.7	Urbanization and urban and rural population change.	235
9.8	Urban and rural fertility, mortality, natural increase, and net migration-reclassification.	237
10.1	Educational level by nation.	255
10.2	Equalization in educational attainment by sex, 1959–85.	258
10.3	Equalization in educational attainment by sex, 1959–70.	259
10.4	Central Asian nationalities with a free command of Russian as a second language.	261
10.5	Russian bilingualism by nation.	263

10.6	Survey results of Russian bilingualism for urban and rural indigenes.	264
10.7	Russian bilingualism among Central Asian nations, by sex.	265
10.8	Class composition by nation.	267
10.9	Distribution of blue- and white-collar employment.	268
10.10	National composition of blue- and white-collar employment.	269
10.11	Intergenerational changes in employment, Uzbeks.	270
10.12	Female representation in blue- and white-collar employment by republic.	272
10.13	Mental labor by republic and sex.	272
10.14	Employed having a higher or specialized secondary education by republic.	273
10.15	Female specialists with higher and specialized secondary education by republic.	274
11.1	National composition of Soviet Central Asia and Kazakhstan.	289
11.2	Population distribution of the Central Asian nations.	290
11.3	National composition of the population by republic.	291
11.4	Urbanization by republic and nation.	292
11.5	National composition of the urban population by republic.	292
11.6	Language of instruction desired for one's children, Uzbeks in Uzbekistan.	293
11.7	Linguistic Russification by nation and location.	296
11.8	Native language retention rates and linguistic Russification.	297
11.9	Nonindigenes claiming fluency in the indigenous language.	298
11.10	International family rates by republic.	300
11.11	Rate of exogamy for indigenes and Russians by republic.	301
11.12	Rate of exogamy for nonindigenes, by republic.	301

Maps and Figures

MAPS

Frontispiece: The Soviet Union and Soviet Central Asia.	ii
2.1 Russian conquest of Central Asia.	29
3.1 Political-administrative structure of Soviet Central Asia, 1988.	43
4.1 Physical geography.	75
4.2 Temperature and precipitation.	77
6.1 Irrigated area, 1988.	134
6.2 Change in sown area, 1970–86.	142
6.3 Change in cotton sowings, 1965–86.	144
6.4 Rural population increase, 1951–87.	150
6.5 Rural population as a percentage of total population, 1987.	152
6.6 Change in irrigated area per rural population, 1970–86.	157
9.1 Soviet economic regions, 1961.	223
9.2 Rural population density, 1979.	231
11.1 Ethnic composition of Soviet Central Asia.	283

FIGURES

10.1 Urban rate of completed higher education by nationality and age, 1970.	256
10.2 Rural rate of completed higher education by nationality and age, 1970.	257
10.3 Free command of Russian as second language by nationality and age, 1970.	262