

Decisions in Organizations

A Three-Country Comparative Study

Frank Heller, Pieter Drenth,
Paul Koopman and Veljko Rus

SAGE Publications

London · Newbury Park · Beverly Hills · New Delhi

Contents

Acknowledgments	vi
I Introduction	1
How the study came about, 1 Outline of the design, 2
The model and methods, 4 Major results, 7
II Theoretical considerations	11
Decision-making and power, 11 Skill utilization, 19
Space-time theories, 28 Designing the longitudinal study, 32
III Design of the research: methods and instruments	37
The model, 37 Data collection, 41 Variables and instruments, 50
The questionnaires, 66
IV Participation in operational decisions	86
Country differences, 88 Outcome variables, 90 Antecedent conditions, 98
Group as unit of analysis, 100 Contingency relations, 101
V Medium- and long-term decision-making	110
The four-phase model, 110 Decision as unit of analysis, 112
Participation in organizations, 114 Outcomes, 127
Predictors, 130 Contingent variables, 138 Multivariate analyses, 145
VI Qualitative material to illustrate the process of longitudinal decision-making	162
How to handle the diachronic process, 163 Budget forecasting, 165
Consultative decision process, 179 Using feedback, 184 Appendices, 192
VII Conclusion	204
Power and the diachronic process, 206 Status power, 209
Metapower, 210 Skill under-utilization, 211 Conflicts, 217
Performance measures, 219 National differences, 223
Policy implications, 227
References	230
Index	246