Preface	vii
Introduction	1
The Restraint of War in Western Moral Tradition; religious and secular developments in this tradition; its role in contemporary debate.
I. The Context
1. The Utility of Just War Categories for Moral Analysis of Contemporary War	11
The question of moral judgments about war in terms of rightness, adequacy, and practicality; the traditional concepts of just cause, right authority, last resort, proportionality, and noncombatant protection described by means of their historical functions and their implications in the context of contemporary war.
2. Can Contemporary Armed Conflicts Be Just?	30
Analysis of five cases: war between the superpowers involving use of strategic nuclear weapons, armed conflicts involving use of tactical/theater nuclear weapons, a conventional armed conflict between established powers, insurgency or revolutionary conflict employing conventional weapons, and terrorist activity.
II. Contemporary Weapons
3. Morally Legitimate Defense	67
Argument for the thesis that a moral defense policy should aim at development and deployment of weapons of defense and offense that may be morally employed in case of need; the implications of this thesis for weapons research and development and for the question of the military draft.

4. Weapons Limits and the Restraint of War: A Just War Critique	86
A historically based comparison of approaches to arms control to show which types of approach have worked and why; specific consideration of the cases of chemical and nuclear weapons; implications for weapons policy.
III. Strategic and Tactical Planning
5. Weapons, Tactics, and Morality in War	107
Analysis of two recently developed weapons, the cruise missile and the neutron warhead, in terms of their implications for the shaping of tactics; how moral analysis is linked to both weapons and tactics.
6. Strategic Targeting	129
Moral analysis and comparison of various models of limited nuclear targeting; the relation of such models to old-style counter-population targeting as viewed from the perspective of just war thought.
IV. Special Problems
7. Individual Decisions and Morality in War	153
Obedience to orders and conscientious objection set within just war tradition, Western theories of the state and the individual, and recent theological analysis; the practical difficulties of individual "just war" decisions.
8. The Causes of War and the Restraint of War	174
The relation that should obtain between values requiring to be protected and preserved and the use of violent means to do this; whether unlimited means of war may ever morally be allowed.
