

Penetration & Protest in Tanzania

*The Impact of the World Economy
on the Pare
1860—1960*

ISARIA N. KIMAMBO

*Professor of History
University of Dar es Salaam*

James Currey
LONDON

Tanzania Publishing House
DAR ES SALAAM

Heinemann Kenya
NAIROBI

Ohio University Press
ATHENS

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Abbreviations	x
Introduction	xi

One

The Nature of Penetration: An Overview

1

Long-distance trade	2
Imperialist penetration	4
Peripheries of two districts, 1891–1928	6
Pare (Same) District, 1928–1947	8
Restoration of production, 1948–1953	11
Planning for faster capitalist development, 1953–1960	14

Two

Pare Economy and Society at the Time of Penetration

19

Pare economy at the beginning of the nineteenth century	19
The system of exchange	24
The political and ideological systems	28
Lineage organisation	29
Loose state organisation	29
The centralised state unit	32

Three

The Initial Stages of Penetration, 1860–1900

37

Penetration of commodity trade	38
Human beings as commodities	40
The imperialist penetration	45
Keeping the caravan route open	46
Installing agents	48
Maintaining peace	50
People's struggles	52
Imperialist demands	53

Contents

Four

Peripheries of Two Districts: Searching for Ways to Survive, 1900–1928

57

The district officials	57
European agents	61
Chiefs and jumbes as agents of colonial rule	63
The people's struggles	65
Effect of the First World War	68
Drive for cash crops	71
Retail trade	73

Five

Creation of One Administrative Unit: The Pare District 1928–1945

76

Peasant crop production	78
Chiefs and 'Native' Authorities	82
Chiefs as colonial servants	84
Changing the 'tide of gloom'	87

Six

Mbiru: Popular Protest Against an Oppressive Colonial System, 1944–1947

95

Mobilisation for action	96
The first demonstration at Same	99
Control of the crowd at Same	100
Delegations to Dar es Salaam	103
Reaction in the villages	105
The legal fight	107
Action against ringleaders	108
Hiring advocates	111
The last demonstration at Same	114
Mbiru as a method of protest	115

Seven

Restoration Strategies, 1947–1953

118

Local government reforms	119
Education as a mobilising tool	120
Literacy campaign	122
From literacy to community development	124
Formal education	126
'Public works'	127
Women's clubs	130
Agricultural production	131

Contents

Eight

Attempts to Plan for Development, 1953–1960

136

The Kigezi model	137
The plan memorandum	140
The land	140
People's activities	141
Policy recommendations	144
Immediate objectives	147
Implementation	148
Soil and water conservation	148
Experimentation	149

Nine

People's Efforts in Capitalist Participation, 1948–1960

155

Differentiation among Pare peasantry	155
Struggles for increased crop production	157
New water schemes	159
Extended use of existing irrigation schemes	161
Marketing struggles	162
The North Pare Cooperative Society Ltd	164
The South Pare Cooperative Society Ltd	166
Kihurio Farmers' Cooperative Society Ltd	166
Shengena Cooperative Society Ltd	167
Struggles to control distribution	167

Ten

The Pare District in 1960

172

Ethnicity versus economics	172
The impact of capitalist penetration	177
Bibliography	181
Index	183

Maps and Illustrations

Map 1 South Pare c.1760	facing page 30
Map 2 The Gweno State c.1760	facing page 31
Map 3 Nineteenth Century caravan routes	facing page 37
Map 4 Pare District	facing page 76
Illustrations	between pages 134 and 136