

Enterprising Women
in Urban Zimbabwe

Gender, Microbusiness, and Globalization

Mary Johnson Osirim

Woodrow Wilson Center Press
Washington, D.C.

Indiana University Press
Bloomington and Indianapolis

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	xi
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii
1 Introduction: Why Study Zimbabwean Women Entrepreneurs in a Globalizing Era?	1
2 Shaping the Discourse on Women and Development: Theory and History in the Study of Women and the Microenterprise Sector	17
3 Crocheters as Dynamic Innovators and Producers of Material Culture	48
4 “The Market Sustains Me”: Traders Persisting under Difficult Odds	94
5 Hairdressers and Seamstresses: Pathways to Success in a Challenging Environment?	133
6 To Support or Not to Support Women’s Microenterprises: The State, NGOs, Informal Associations, and Coping Strategies	177
7 Conclusion: Moving beyond Simple Survival in the Microenterprise Sector	199
References	229
Index	239