

The Economic Theory of Central Planning

John Bennett

University College of Swansea,
United Kingdom

Basil Blackwell

Contents

List of Figures	xi
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xiv
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Subject Matter	1
1.2 The Socialist Controversy	2
1.3 Outline of the Book	6
2 Optimal Planning Procedures	9
2.1 Introduction	9
2.2 Properties of Planning Procedures	10
2.3 Gradient Methods	13
2.4 Large-step Models	27
2.5 Concluding Comments	35
3 Material Balances	38
3.1 Introduction	38
3.2 Simple Iterative Procedures	40
3.3 Alternative Institutional Interpretations	45
3.4 Iteration under More General Assumptions	46
3.5 Aggregation	58
3.6 Plan Implementation Problems	62
3.7 Concluding Comments	65
4. Managerial Motivation and the Behaviour of the Firm	66
4.1 Introduction	66
4.2 Some Alternative Objectives for the Firm	68
4.3 The Tautness of Plans	73
4.4 The New Soviet Incentive Model: Static Analysis	77

5	Managerial Incentives: Further Issues	89
5.1	Introduction	89
5.2	The Dynamic Incentive Problem and the Ratchet Principle	89
5.3	General Equilibrium Interactions	101
5.4	Decentralized Price-setting	107
5.5	Concluding Comments	110
6	Distributional Issues	113
6.1	Introduction	113
6.2	Distributing a Fixed Sum	114
6.3	The Incentive to Work	119
6.4	The Allocation of Workers to Occupations	123
6.5	The Distribution of Individual Goods	125
6.6	Concluding Comments	129
7	'Prices versus Quantities'	131
7.1	Introduction	131
7.2	The Basic Model	132
7.3	More than One Good or Firm	137
7.4	The Validity of the Quadratic Approximations	141
7.5	Subjective and Objective Uncertainty	144
7.6	Alternative Forms of Pure Signal	145
7.7	Contingent Pricing	148
7.8	The Role of the Iterative Procedure	151
7.9	Concluding Comments	157
8	Macroeconomics in a Closed Centrally Planned Economy	159
8.1	Introduction	159
8.2	The Basic Framework of Temporary Equilibrium with Rationing	161
8.3	The Pure Repressed Inflation Model: Further Discussion	167
8.4	Modified Models of Repressed Inflation	172
8.5	The Portes Model	178
8.6	The Economics of Shortage	183
8.7	Concluding Comments	187
9	Foreign Trade	189
9.1	Introduction	189
9.2	The Administration of Foreign Trade and the Effects of Foreign Disturbances	190

9.3 Foreign Trade in a Price-insensitive Centrally Planned Economy	192
9.4 Repressed Inflation and Foreign Trade	196
9.5 Portes's Formulation of Internal and External Balance	198
9.6 Concluding Comments	206
10 The Kaleckian Growth Model	208
10.1 Introduction	208
10.2 The Basic Framework	209
10.3 Surplus Labour and the Rate of Investment	212
10.4 Adjustment of the Capital-Output Ratio (Recasting)	220
10.5 Adjustment of Other Policy Instruments	230
10.6 The Structure of Investment	231
10.7 Perspective Planning	238
10.8 Concluding Comments	242
Notes	244
References	272
Name Index	290
Subject Index	294