

---

Central and Eastern Europe: The Challenge of Transition

---

Edited by

Regina Cowen Karp

sipri

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

1993

---

Contents

---

Foreword	ix
Preface	xi
Abbreviations and acronyms	xiii

Part I. Introduction

1. The challenge of transition	3
Regina Cowen Karp
I. Introduction	3
II. Quo vadis , security?	10
III. Conclusion	14

Part II. Central and Eastern Europe: old legacies, new conflicts

2. Post-communist countries: challenges and problems	17
Adam Bromke
I. Introduction	17
II. Diversity in the region	21
III. Economic reform in Eastern Europe	23
IV. Economic transformations in the former USSR	27
V. The issue of de-communization	29
VI. Prospects of democracy in the former USSR	32
VII. Nationalism in Eastern Europe	34
VIII. Ethnic conflicts in the former USSR	36
IX. The collapse of communism and the West	38
X. The case of economic assistance	39
XI. Beyond communism	42
3. Regional organizations and ethnic conflict	45
Jennone Walker
I. Introduction	45
II. Existing mechanisms	47
III. What difference have regional organizations made?	51
IV. What more can be done?	52
V. What more can other organizations do about non-members?	56
VI. Would more norms help?	59
VII. The mechanics of peace-keeping	64
VIII. Conclusion	65

Part III. The regional debate

4. Poland: national security in a changing environment	69
Hieronim Kubiak
I. Introduction	69
II. The concept of security	69
III. Potential threats: the international environment and internal affairs	74
IV. Organization of military forces	85
V. Organization of security decision-making institutions	92
VI. Seeking an alignment with Western security organizations	94
VII. Chances for regional co-operation	96
VIII. Conclusion	97
Table 4.1. Main armaments of the Polish armed forces	86
Table 4.2. Proportion of military expenditure in state budget and gross national product	87
Table 4.3. Budget structure of the Ministry of National Defence	87
5. The Czech and Slovak republics: security consequences of the breakup of the CSFR	101
Jan Urban
I. Introduction	101
II. Historical lessons	102
III. The new geopolitical situation in Central Europe	105
IV. Slovak geopolitical axioms	105
V. The geopolitical axioms of the new Czech state	108
VI. The CSFR: the political situation before the split	110
VII. The economics of the breakup	113
VIII. Perception of security issues	115
IX. Arms industry and arms export control	117
X. The purges of the state apparatus	118
XI. Military problems of the breakup of the CSFR	120
XII. Conclusions	121
6. Hungary: defining the boundaries of security	122
Pál Dunay
I. Introduction	122
II. The security concept	124
III. Potential risks, threats and adversaries	130
IV. The military instrument as a factor of security	140
V. Security policy decision making	144
VI. Integration with the West	146
VII. Sub-regional security co-operation	151

7. Creating security in the Balkans	155
Daniel N. Nelson
I. Introduction	155
II. Living with the legacy of empires: a threat-rich environment	156
III. Country-specific conditions	158
IV. Post-communist transitions and the Balkan security dilemma	170
V. Conclusion: policy implications	175
8. The former Yugoslavia: emerging security orientations	177
F. Stephen Larrabee
I. Introduction	177
II. Country-specific studies	178
III. Emerging patterns and alignments	191
IV. New influences in the region	192
V. The return of history	195
9. Russia: security in transition	196
Alexander Kononov
I. Introduction	196
II. The domestic situation as a source of instability in Europe: the political, economic and military dimensions	199
Table 9.1. Apportionment of TLE among the Soviet successor states	221
Table 9.2. Quantity of TLE to be destroyed by Russia to comply with the provisions of the Tashkent Document	222
10. Security issues in Ukraine and Belarus	225
Kathleen Mihalisko
I. Introduction	225
II. Ukraine, Belarus, Russia: the Slavic triad	226
III. National consciousness and political activism	231
IV. The Soviet Union's final year	235
V. The CIS and the Russian-Ukrainian problem	237
VI. The nuclear temptation	240
VII. Ukrainian national security in a non-nuclear context	246
VIII. 'Security' with Russia or neutrality?	250
IX. The search for new regional arrangements	255
11. The CIS: sources of stability and instability	258
Caroline Kennedy-Pipe
I. Introduction	258
II. The formation of the CIS	258
III. Russia and the CIS	261

IV. Dominance and independence in the CIS: the problem of Russia and Ukraine	264
V. Independence and interdependence: Russia and Moldova	267
VI. Armenia and Azerbaijan: the politics of regionalism	269
VII. A new power bloc? The Central Asian republics	272
VIII. Conclusions	279
12. The Baltic states: quo vadis?	283
Peter Vares and Mare Haab
I. Introduction	283
II. Options for the Baltic states	284
III. Threats to Baltic security	290
IV. Political élites	298
V. The new military élite	300
VI. Conclusion	305
Table 12.1. National composition of the population in the Baltic states, 1920–92	295
Table 12.2. The main trading partners of Estonia in September 1992	298
About the authors	307
Index	311