

LAND MANAGEMENT AND SURVIVAL

Edited by

ANDERS HJORT

Scandinavian Institute of African Studies, Uppsala, Sweden

Contents

Anders Hjort Introduction - Interdisciplinary Views on Land Management and Survival	9
Christer Krokfors Understanding African Food Situations	16
Jonas Björnerstedt Drought Aid and Interdisciplinary Research	27
Göran Haldin Finland's Development Assistance and Forestry Projects	34
Per Brandström Do We Really Learn from Experience? Reflections on Development Efforts in Sukumaland, Tanzania	41
Carl Christiansson Different Perspectives on the Soil Erosion Complex in East African Drylands	57
Gudrun Dahl On Anthropology and Ecology - The Prospects of Sharing More than Common Shortcomings	63
Turi Hammer Theoretical and Practical Endeavour in Dryland Africa - Retrospect and Prospect	70

Ulf Helldén
Land Degradation and Land Productivity Monitoring - Needs for an Integrated Approach	77
Lennart Olsson
Integration of Physical and Human Geography in a Geographical Information System	88
Gunnar Poulsen
Halting the Spreading Desert by Means of Forestry - Does it Make Sense? An Attempt to Analyze the Role of Forestry in the Sahel	98
Anders Rapp
Why Do We Need a Scientific Analysis of Dryland De- gradation in Africa?	109
Kjeld Rasmussen
A Holistic View of Ecological Imbalance in Drylands	119
Arja Vainio-Mattila
Socio-Economic Studies on Fuelwood Production in the Bura Settlement Scheme in Eastern Kenya	128
Espen Wæhle
Some Reflections on Inter-Disciplinary Research	138
About the Authors	144