

Suicide in East German Literature

Fiction, Rhetoric, and the Self-Destruction of Literary Heritage

Robert Blankenship

CAMDEN HOUSE

Rochester, New York

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction: The Rhetoric of Suicide in East Germany	1
1: Suicide as an Antifascist Literary Trope: 1945–71	14
2: Suicide and the Fluidity of Literary Heritage: Ulrich Plenzdorf's Die neuen Leiden des jungen W.	25
3: Remembering to Death: Werner Heiduczek's Tod am Meer	47
4: Suicide and the Reevaluation of Classicism: Christa Wolf's Kein Ort. Nirgends	71
5: Suicidal Voices: Heiner Müller's Hamletmaschine and Sibylle Muthesius's Flucht in die Wolken	95
6: Specters of Suicide: Christoph Hein's Horns Ende	110
Conclusion: The Reality of Fictional Suicides	138
Epilogue: The Literariness of East German Literature	144
Notes	147
Bibliography	171
Index	185