

Global Power Structure,
Technology and World Economy in the Late Twentieth Century

by Mihály Simai

Pinter Publishers, London

Contents

Introduction	9
--------------	---

Part One

The New Regulating Forces of the World Economy and the Nature of the Changes	11
1. Economic Problems of a Period of Global Changes: Old and New Theories. Longer Term Consequences of the Recession and the Recovery of the 1980s	11
2. The Economies of the Developed Industrial Countries of the Western World	24
What Has Happened to Inflation: Lasting or Temporary Improvement?	33
Some Economic Policy Issues of the Recovery	40
3. The Crisis, the Recession and the Developing Countries: the Interplay of Internal and External Factors	44
4. The Autonomous Growth Potential of the Socialist Countries and the Global Recessions	53

Part Two

The Changing Global Power Structure in the World Economy of the Late Twentieth Century	61
1. The Concepts of "World Order" or "Global Systems"	61
2. Politics, Economy and Interdependence in the Changing World System	66
3. The Power Structure of the Contemporary World System and Future Trends	70
Global Powers in the Contemporary World System	72
The Role of Economic Power	77
The Characteristics of the Hegemonic Economy	79
Main Trends of Changes in the Economic Power Structure	82
The Transnational Corporations as Power Centres	93
4. Economic Power and International Economic Policies	95
5. The Socialist Countries in the Changing Global Power Structure	103

Part Three

Technology in the Global Economic System	109
1. Economic Sciences and the Role of New Technology	109
2. Main Trends of the Technology Market in the 1980s	117
3. The Problems of International Technology Transfer	130
Informal Methods of International Technology Transfer	132
Commercial Methods of International Technology Transfer	135
Efforts to Control the Transfer of Technology: "Appropriate Technology" and Conditions	144
4. Internal Conditions for the Efficient Use of Imported Technology	150
5. The Markets for the New Technology and the Socialist Countries of Eastern Europe	158
6. International Relations and Future Changes in Science and Technology	165

Part Four

Structural Disturbances in the World Economy and the Changing International Economic Relations in the Late Twentieth Century	169
1. Structural Interrelations between World Output and World Trade	169
2. The Problems of Agriculture at the End of the Century	178
Agricultural Output and World Trade in Agrarian Produce	179
The Demand for Foodstuffs and the World Market	186
3. Main Trends in Industrial Development and the Perspectives of Structural Changes in the World Economy at the End of the Twentieth Century	191
The Raw Material Sector in the World Economy	196
The Changing Structure in Manufacturing and the Conditions, Factors, and Directions of the Development of Internationalization	206
Export Processing Zones—Special Zones—and the Internationalization in Industry	211
Global Shifts: Electronics and the Automobile Industry as Case Studies	214
The Structural Implications of the Defence Sector	227
4. Economic Policies and Structural Changes in International Perspectives	238
Business Strategies and the Process of Structural Changes in the World Economy	241
Structural Adjustment Policies and External Changes	245
Sectoral Adjustment: The Case of the Developing Countries	249
Structural Imbalances: The Trade Policy Response	252

Part Five

New Conditions and Tasks in Global Economic Cooperation	259
1. Incentives of and Barriers to International Cooperation and the Problems of Global Economic Security	260
2. The Past, Present and Future of the International Monetary System	270
3. Global and Regional Conditions for Change	279
Notes	285