

Privatization in Rural Eastern Europe

The Process of Restitution and Restructuring

Edited by

David Turnock

Reader in Geography, University of Leicester, UK

STUDIES OF COMMUNISM IN TRANSITION

Edward Elgar

Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA

Figures

1.1	States of Eastern Europe	2
1.2	Resources of Communist Eastern Europe	4
1.3	Rural population in the mountains of Eastern Europe	29
4.1	Czech Republic: aspects of privatization of agriculture, 1994	96
4.2	Czech Republic: aspects of agricultural production, 1994	100
4.3	Czech Republic: aspects of agricultural land and employment	106
5.1	East Germany: the New Länder of reunified Germany	121
5.2	East Germany: reprivatization of rural land	127
5.3	East Germany: agricultural land leased from the Treuhandanstalt	129
5.4	East Germany: farm businesses	132
5.5	East Germany: conceptual model of emerging rural areas	139
6.1	Hungary: regional assistance	161
7.1	Poland: state sector share of agricultural land, 1994	170
7.2	Poland: privatization of state enterprises	174
7.3	Poland: private sector employment, 1993	176
7.4	Poland: rural unemployment, 1994	179
7.5	Poland: investment in agriculture, 1992	184
7.6	Poland: rural dwellings with piped water, 1992	186
7.7	Poland: rural telephones	187
7.8	Poland: shops in rural areas	188
7.9	Poland: fallow and temporary setaside	192

7.10	Poland: decline in cereal yields between 1988–1990 and 1992–1994	194
7.11	Poland: decline in cattle, 1992–1994	195
8.1	Romania: the Carpathians and Agency/Commission for Mountainous Regions	234
8.2	Romania: landslides in Vrancea	238
8.3	Romania: natural potential of the environment in the Pătârlagele area of the Buzău Subcarpathians	240
8.4	Romania: economic and settlement planning for Bihor county	242
9.1	Slovakia: aspects of agriculture, 1994	252
9.2	Slovakia: cooperatives and rural settlement in the Nitra area	270
10.1	Slovenia: systems of agricultural land use, 1985	289
10.2	Slovenia: agricultural population, 1991	293
10.3	Slovenia: types of farm by income source in the villages of Plužna and Polje pri Vodicaĥ	294
11.1	Ecofarms in Poland	304
11.2	Aspects of organic farming in Poland	306
11.3	Markets for ecofarms in Poland	308
11.4	Fruit-growing areas of Romania	323
11.5	The distilling process for the production of plum brandy	327
11.6	Rural tourism in the Romanian Carpathians	336