

We Are the Machine

The Computer, the Internet, and Information in Contemporary German Literature

Paul A. Youngman

CAMDEN HOUSE

Rochester, New York

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xv
Introduction: Machines, Computers, and the Liberal Humanist Subject	1
1: Losing Ground to the Machine: Electronic Brains in the Works of Heinrich Hauser and Friedrich Dürrenmatt	28
2: Fearing the Machine — Two Nightmares in the 1990s: Gerd Heidenreich’s New Riddle of the Sphinx and Barbara Frischmuth’s Hidden Meaning	62
3: Becoming the Machine: Günter Grass’s and Erich Loest’s Virtual History, René Pollesch’s Postdramatic Imaginings, and “Real” Cyber-Relationships according to Christine Eichel and Daniel Glattauer	94
Conclusion: Questions to Ponder	153
Bibliography	159
Index	167