

KROPOTKIN
AND THE RISE OF
REVOLUTIONARY ANARCHISM
1872–1886

CAROLINE CAHM

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

CAMBRIDGE

NEW YORK PORT CHESTER

MELBOURNE SYDNEY

CONTENTS

Preface	page ix
Acknowledgements	xii
Introduction	1

Part I Kropotkin and the development of the theory of anarchist communism

1 Bakuninism	17
From reform to revolution: 1872 Kropotkin's first contact with the International and bakuninism	17
The Anti-authoritarian International: statist/anti-statist polarisation	28
2 Anarchist communism	36
The origin of anarchist communist ideas	36
Kropotkin and anarchist communism 1877-1886	44

Part II Kropotkin and the development of anarchist ideas of revolutionary action by individuals and small groups (1872-1886)

3 Revolutionary action and the emergent anarchist movement of the seventies	71
4 Propaganda by deed: the development of the idea	76
5 Kropotkin and propaganda by deed	92
6 Kropotkin and acts of revolt	116
7 The Congress of London 1881 and 'The Spirit of Revolt'	152
8 The trial of Lyon 1883 and response to persecution	178

Part III Kropotkin and the development of anarchist views of collective revolutionary action (1872–1886)

9	Trade unionism and the emergent anarchist movement of the seventies	213
10	Kropotkin and collective action in the labour movement	231
	Early hostility to trade unions: his denunciation of British trade unionism	231
	The Pittsburgh strikes in the United States and the revival of the labour movement in England and France	242
	The Strikers' International	251
	Conclusion	270
	Notes	287
	Bibliography	350
	Index	367