

LITERATURE,
EDUCATION, AND ROMANTICISM

Reading as Social Practice, 1780-1832

ALAN RICHARDSON

Boston College

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

1994

12.064.76

Contents

Preface	page xiii
Abbreviations	xvii
1. Childhood, education, and power	I
1. Education and literary culture in the Romantic era	2
2. Some versions of childhood	8
3. Ideology and the production of childhood	25
4. Childhood and power in The Prelude	33
2. School time	44
1. Experimental education	48
2. Wordsworth, Blake, and catechistic method	64
3. Towards national education	77
4. A simple engine: the Lake poets and the Madras system	91
5. Coda: nature, education, and the child's freedom	103
3. Children's literature and the work of culture	109
1. Fairy tales and the politics of literacy	112
2. Discipline and publish: the child as text	127
3. A poetics of innocence	142
4. Blake, children's literature, and colonialism	153
4. Women, education, and the novel	167
1. The education of daughters and mothers	170
2. Well-regulated minds: development in the domestic novel	185
3. From Emile to Frankenstein : the education of monsters	203
5. The pursuit of knowledge under difficulties	213
1. Useful knowledge and popular tales	217
2. Self-education and self-representation	232
3. Uneducated poets	247
6. Epilogue: Romanticism and the idea of literature	260
Notes	273
Index	319