

FIELDS OF KNOWLEDGE

French academic culture in comparative perspective, 1890–1920

FRITZ RINGER

Mellon Professor of History, University of Pittsburgh

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

*Cambridge New York Port Chester
Melbourne Sydney*

EDITIONS DE LA MAISON DES SCIENCES DE L'HOMME

Paris

Contents

List of tables	page xi
Acknowledgments	xii
Introduction: The intellectual field, intellectual history, and the sociology of knowledge	1
Studying intellectual fields	4
Academic cultures, social relations, and the intellectuals	13
Reductionism, relativism, and the sociology of knowledge	18
1 Education, the middle classes, and the intellectuals: the social field in modern France and Germany	26
The comparative history of educational systems	26
French secondary and higher education since Napoleon	40
Educational segmentation and the French bourgeoisie	55
Bourgeois culture and the intellectuals in modern France	75
2 The meanings of education, 1	94
Bildung and its implications in the German tradition, 1890–1930	95
The position of Matthew Arnold	108
Roots and dimensions of the French education debate of 1890–1920	114
The French image of the intellectual proletariat	127
3 The meanings of education, 2	141
The defense of culture générale	141
The reformist position	160
Three historical perspectives	177
Toward meritocracy	189
4 The new French university	196
The crisis of German academic culture	196

Science and politics: aspects of the French intellectual field during the late nineteenth century	207
The ideology of the new Sorbonne, 1900–1904	225
The literary opposition	237
5 Perspectives upon selected disciplines	248
Philosophy and the sciences of man	248
Charles Seignobos and the new scientific history	265
Emile Durkheim on education	282
Science as a vocation	299
Conclusion: education as interpretation	314
Notes	324
Bibliography	356
Index	368

Tables

	page
1.1 The inclusiveness of French secondary and higher education, 1840–1950: degrees and enrollments as percentages of relevant age groups, with Prussian and German comparisons	48
1.2 Social origins and educational/occupational choices of French public secondary pupils about 1863	56
1.3 Social origins of students at French university-level institutions, 1961–63	64
1.4 University-level education of French and German elites, 1830–1930	70
2.1 Positions taken before the Ribot Commission of 1899 on classical and modern secondary education	124