

Religious Diversity and Social Change

American Cities, 1890–1906

KEVIN J. CHRISTIANO

University of Notre Dame

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York New Rochelle Melbourne Sydney

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	page x
Preface	xiii
I "As Slavery Never Did": American Religion and the Rise of the City	1
A Statistical View of Turn-of-the-Century Urbanization	4
Religion Reacts to the City	13
Cities as Units of Analysis	17
Urban and Religious Growth, 1890–1906	19
II "Numbering Israel": United States Census Data on Religion	22
Data on Religion in Nineteenth-Century United States Censuses	24
Censuses of Religious Bodies, 1906–1936	30
Validity and Value of Census Church Membership Data	32
Previous Uses of United States Census Data on Religious Bodies	42
III "An Infinite Variety of Religions": The Meaning and Measurement of Religious Diversity	49
Historical Meaning of American Religious Diversity	50
Social Sources of Religious Liberty	51
Establishments Formal and Informal	58
Measurement of Religious Diversity	61
IV "A Motley of Peoples and Cultures": Urban Populations and Religious Diversity	66
Urbanization and Social Differentiation	68
City Size, Urban Growth, and Religious Diversity	71
	vii

	Foreign and Nonwhite Populations and Religious Diversity	74
	Conclusion	87
V	"A New Society": Industrialization and Religious Diversity	89
	Sociological Approaches to Industrialization and Religious Diversity	91
	Measures of Industrialization, 1890–1905	94
	Manufacturing and Religious Diversity	96
	Discussion	101
VI	"No Fast Friend to Policy or Religion": Literacy and Religious Diversity	105
	Literacy in American Cities, 1890	106
	Historical Views of Religion and Literacy	107
	Literacy as a Sociological Variable	110
	Illiteracy and Religious Diversity	111
	Conclusion	117
VII	"God's Bible at the Devil's Girdle": Religious Diversity and Urban Secularization	118
	The Urban Moral Order and Religion	121
	Religious Diversity and Religious Subjectivization	123
	Religious Diversity and Secularization	126
	Discussion	129
VIII	"If the Religion of Rome Becomes Ours": Religious Diversity, Subcultural Conflict, and Denominational Realignment	134
	The Historical Setting for Religious Conflict	136
	Urban Subcultural Conflict and Protestant Diversity	142
	Subcultural Conflict and Denominational Realignment	144
	Discussion	148
IX	"Matters Merely Indifferent": Religious Diversity and American Denominationalism	150
	Religious Diversity and American Denominationalism	151
	Conclusion	153
	Appendixes
A	Cities in the Study	156
B	Church Membership and Population in 122 Cities, 1890 and 1906	160
C	Categorization of Religious Bodies, 1890 and 1906	164

D	Composition of Church Membership in 122 Cities, 1890 and 1906	172
E	A Typology of Urban Religious Change, 1890–1906	176
F	Religious Diversity Scores for 122 Cities, 1890 and 1906	180
G	A Note on Weighted Least Squares (WLS) Regression Analysis	185
	Notes	187
	References	203
	Index	232