

Women, property and Islam

Palestinian experiences, 1920–1990

Annelies Moors

University of Amsterdam and University of Leiden

Contents

Acknowledgements	page xi
1. Introduction: women and property	1
1.1. The theme: lessons from the field	1
1.2. The perspective: a note on women and property	3
1.3. From fieldwork to text	7
Part I Politics, economy and kinship	15
2. The lives of four women: introducing property and politics	17
2.1. Palestine: the international context	17
2.2. Imm Sâlim from the village of Al-Balad, eastern Jabal Nablus	21
2.3. Imm Shâkir and Imm Hilmi from Nablus city	29
2.4. Imm Muhammad from Jaffa, living in Balata camp	39
2.5. Property: from production to consumption?	45
3. Women and inheritance	48
3.1. Historians and anthropologists: an urban-rural dichotomy?	48
3.2. The legal discourse: property and person	50
3.3. Daughters: kinship rather than property	53
3.4. Widows: children rather than property	59
3.5. Those with a better chance to be given	66
3.6. Inheriting property: what does it mean?	75
Part II The dower	77
4. The dower: marriage, gender and social stratification	79
4.1. The mahr in academia: property, gender and social status	82
4.2. Islamic law and marriage contracts: the paradox of property and person	84
4.3. Local perspectives: marriage as relation in process	87
5. Marriage: the prompt dower	92
5.1. The regular prompt dower: contracts and social practice	92
5.2. The token dower: a plethora of meanings	106

5.3. Household goods and gold	113
5.4. The dower and houses: the 'devaluation' of the dower	119
5.5. The intifada: marrying 'in silence'	121
5.6. From dower to provider: ambiguities and contradictions	124
6. Repudiation and widowhood: the deferred dower	127
6.1. The contracts: the increasing prominence of the deferred dower	127
6.2. Dissolution of marriage: the stories of Imm Mahmūd and Rihāb	130
6.3. Repudiation on the husband's initiative: unilateral talāq	137
6.4. Separation on the wife's initiative: khul' and tafriq	142
6.5. Widows: claiming as the exception	146
6.6. The deferred dower: underlining conjugality?	147
A note on mahr property and anthropological theory	148
Part III Paid labour and property	151
7. Poverty, wage labour and property	153
7.1. Poor rural widows: charity or toiling?	153
7.2. The camps: making ends meet	164
7.3. The stigma of serving: the destitute	170
7.4. Crossing all boundaries: earning a living in Israel	177
7.5. Poor women, owners of property?	186
8. Gender and garment production	190
8.1. Producing garments: three labour stories	191
8.2. From artisanal production to subcontracting	200
8.3. Sewing: a profession in decline	203
8.4. Gender in the labour process: control and resistance	206
8.5. Women and property: seamstresses, garment workers and subcontractors	211
9. Education, professional work and property	214
9.1. Employed in the professions: three labour stories	214
9.2. The first step: getting an education	224
9.3. Entering the professions: more women, different women	230
9.4. Single women, social class and property	235
9.5. Marriage and property: the dower and the conjugal fund	240
A note on women, paid employment and property	250
10. Women and property revisited	253
10.1. Commoditisation and the male provider: constructing gender	253
10.2. Women, property, and power: acquiescence and subversion	256
10.3. Different positions, various strategies	258
References	261
Index	269