

Langaa &
African Studies Centre

GLOBAL WARNING

An ethnography of the encounter between global and local climate-change discourses in the Bamenda Grassfields,
Cameroon

Sara de Wit
African Studies Centre, Leiden

Contents

List of figures.....	vii
List of photos.....	vii
List of maps.....	viii
Acknowledgement.....	ix
Acronyms.....	xi

1. INTRODUCTION.....	1
2. THEORETICAL AND METHODOLOGICAL CONSIDERATIONS....	22
The scope of study: From Kyoto to the Bamenda Grassfields and back to Copenhagen.....	22
Social constructivism as an alternative ‘lens’.....	40
The power of discourses, or discourses as power?.....	58
3. TALKING CLIMATE CHANGE INTO EXISTENCE – THE ROLE OF NGOs IN DISSEMINATING THE GREEN MESSAGE	66
Introduction.....	66
The modern environmental era: The social construction of climate change in historical perspective.....	76
‘Thinking globally, acting locally’: Deconstructing Kyoto.....	92
NGOs seen increasingly as authorities in building Green norms and settings global standards.....	98
Climate change mitigation and adaptation in Bamenda ...	105
4. TRANSLATING THE CLIMATE BACK AND FORTH – TRADITIONAL RULERS IN THE FIGHT AGAINST CLIMATE CHANGE.....	125

PART I

Introduction	125
A brief historical overview of the settlements of chiefdoms in the Grassfields	128
The ritual, moral and legal patterns of power in the Chiefdoms	135
The Fons in the colonial state	138
Climate change and its discursive ‘compatibility’ with Grassfields cosmologies	140

PART II

Climate change as a possible new framework to redefine local discourses and symbolic power	145
Cameroon traditional rulers against climate change	146
5. BELIEVING IN CLIMATE CHANGE – A GRASSROOTS PERSPECTIVE	160
Introduction: How access to discourses changes the Weather	160
‘We are the climate’ – Climate trajectories as a societal Critique.....	167
The power of indeterminate meaning.....	182
‘We are not God oh!’ How a secular discourse fuses with the sacred.....	189
‘Climate change kills, action now!’ Eschatological anxieties over the arrival of the Apocalypse	195
6. CONCLUDING REFLECTIONS.....	205
References	212
Appendix: Average rainfall and temperature data.....	219