

FOOD SECURITY POLICY IN AFRICA BETWEEN DISASTER RELIEF AND STRUCTURAL ADJUSTMENT

Reflections on the Conception and Effectiveness of Policies:
the Case of Tanzania

GABRIELE GEIER

FRANK CASS • LONDON
Published in association with the German Development Institute, Berlin

Contents

Introduction: The Problem and the Essential Features of the Study	1
Part I Trend in the International Debate on Food Security	7
1 Food Insecurity as a National Supply Problem	8
1.1 Trade and Aid: Closing the Domestic Food Gap with Imports	9
1.2 Growth of Domestic Food Production: Food Self-sufficiency	10
2 Food Insecurity as an Access Problem	14
2.1 Entitlement Approach: the Right to Food	14
2.2 Poverty and Hunger: Raising Purchasing Power	17
3 Synopsis and Assessment of the International Debate	21
Part II Reflections on the Effectiveness of Policies in Relation to Various Aspects of Food Security	27
1 Reflections on the Theory of Consumption: Links between Income, Demand for Food and Consumption	29
1.1 Consumption Decisions by Households: Neo-Classical Theory of Consumption	29

1.2	Bargaining Process within Households: Influence of the Gender Division of Roles on Household Demand	32
1.3	"Household Production of Meals": the Modern Theory of Households and the Social Organization of Work	37
2	Production for Subsistence and for the Market: the Dual Role of the African Household	42
2.1	Orientation towards Subsistence as a Sign of Strength?	43
2.2	Production for Subsistence as a Reaction to Underdeveloped Markets	46
2.3	Production for Subsistence to Safeguard Traditional Solidarity and Land Use Rights	52
2.4	Production for Subsistence as Part of Women's Security Strategy	53
2.5	Interim Appraisal: Production for Subsistence Versus Production for the Market	55
2.6	Food Production for the Market: Significance of Producer Prices and the Structure of Factor and Commodity Markets	57
3	Conclusions for the Debate on Food Security: Food Insecurity as a Development Problem	63
3.1	Rational Actors with Different Interests in Heterogeneous Socio-Economic Structures	63
3.2	From Alleviating Poverty to Widening People's Choice and Reducing their Vulnerability	67
3.3	Analysis of Food Insecurity by Reference to Food Security Systems	69

Part III	Food Security and Policy Interventions - the Case of Tanzania	73
1	A Brief Introduction	73
2	The Political and Economic Background to the Formulation of Food Security Policies	76
2.1	Political Stability: a Precondition for Food Security	76
2.2	Structure of the Economy, External Shocks and Dependence on External Resources as Limiting Factors	78
3	Food Security Policy in Tanzania since Independence	80
3.1	Domestic Food Self-Sufficiency: a Major Objective of the Development Strategy	80
3.2	Government Action Taken until the Early 1980s to Achieve Domestic Food Self-Sufficiency	82
3.3	The 1984 National Food Strategy: Food Self-Sufficiency and the Beginnings of Liberalization	89
3.4	Food Security Policy in the Context of the Economic Recovery Programme and Developments after 1986	93
3.5	Food Security Policy that Ignores the Role of Women	97
4	Assessment of Tanzania's Food Security Policy and Outlook	99

Part IV	Development of Food Security in a Region Remote from Important Markets: Case Studies in Rukwa Region	102
1	Subject of the Empirical Analysis and Methodological Approach	102
2	Regional Development since Independence and Basic Structural Features of Rukwa Region	105
3	Essential Aspects of Household Economics	115
3.1	The Role of Maize-growing and the Structure of Production	115
3.2	Social Organization of Work	119
4	Problems Posed by the Operationalization of Food Security at Household Level	124
5	Food Security System of "Typical" Home Economies	127
5.1	Potential Access to Food: Entitlements through Production by the Household and Trade	127
5.2	Actual Availability of Food for Consumption within the Home Economy	130
5.3	"Household Production of Meals" and the Workload of Women	135
5.4	Potential Safeguards against Access Risks	137
5.5	Future Ability to Acquire Food and Adjust to Structural Changes	142

Part V	Conclusions for the Conception of Food Security Policies in Sub-Saharan Africa	150
1	Essential Findings of the Study	151
2	Guidelines for the Conception of Food Security Policies	154
3	Adjustment of One-Sided Policies and Actions	160
3.1	Adjustment of the "Male Bias": Strengthening the Economic and Social Status of Women, Reducing their Workload and Changing the Gender Division of Roles	160
3.2	Adjustment of the "Income Bias": Stabilizing the Subsistence Economy and Increasing the Security of Entitlements	163
3.3	Adjustment of the "Price Bias": Improving Agricultural Services and Increasing Agricultural Productivity	165
4	Outlook: Need and Prospects for the Reorientation of Food Security Policies	166
4.1	Food Security Policies to Benefit the Rural Population	167
4.2	External Support through Development Cooperation: Food Policy Versus Food Security Policy	169
Notes		173