

The state and rural class formation in Ghana: A comparative analysis

Piet Konings

KPI

London, Boston, Melbourne and Henley

Contents

List of Abbreviations	ix
List of Tables and Maps	xi
Acknowledgments	xv
Introduction	1
Chapter 1 The Colonial and Post-Colonial State in Ghana	25
Chapter 2 The State and Cocoa Production in Ahafo	43
2.1. The development of cocoa production in Ahafo	52
2.1.1. The history of Ahafo	52
2.1.2. Ahafo's economy prior to the introduction of cocoa cultivation	56
2.1.3. The introduction and expansion of cocoa production in Ahafo	61
2.2. Social stratification and class formation in cocoa production in Ahafo	75
2.2.1. Peasantry and capitalist farmers	75
2.2.2. Labour	83
2.2.2.1. Abusa labour	86
2.2.2.2. Annual labour	96
2.2.2.3. Casual labour	101
2.3. The post-colonial state and cocoa producers	104
2.3.1. The state and increasing surplus extraction from cocoa producers	105
2.3.2. Cocoa producers versus the state over low cocoa price	109
2.3.2.1. Cocoa producers' declining production	114

Contents

2.3.2.2.	Cocoa producers' switch to production of crops other than cocoa	117
2.3.2.3.	Smuggling of their produce by cocoa producers	122
2.3.3.	Increasing state intervention in cocoa production	123
2.3.3.1.	The Ashanti and the Eastern Region Cocoa Projects	124
2.3.3.2.	State cocoa plantations	128
2.3.3.2.1.	Kenyase no. 2 cocoa plantation	130
2.3.3.2.2.	The Mim cocoa plantation	133
2.4	Conclusion	137
Chapter 3	The State and Capitalist Rice Farming in the Builsa District of Northern Ghana	140
3.1.	The domestic community and its function as supplier and reproducer of cheap labour for the export economy of Southern Ghana	144
3.1.1.	The Builsa land tenure system	144
3.1.2.	Builsa economic organization	148
3.1.3.	Changes brought about in the Builsa land tenure system and socio-economic organization during the colonial period	153
3.1.3.1.	Changes effected in the customary land tenure system	153
3.1.3.2.	Superimposition of a 'modern' land law onto the 'neo-traditional' land tenure system	154
3.1.3.3.	Builsa society as a labour reserve for the Southern export economy	158
3.2.	The emergence of capitalist rice farming within the domestic community	163
3.3.	Capitalist rice farming and class formation in the Fumbisi Valley	177
3.3.1.	The class of capitalist rice farmers in the Fumbisi Valley	178
3.3.2.	Labour in the Fumbisi Valley	201
3.3.2.1.	Permanent workers	202
3.3.2.2.	Casual workers	211
3.4.	The domestic community's conflict with the capitalist rice farmers: the Gbedembilisi Valley Dispute	221

3.5.	Conclusion	232
Chapter 4	The State and Irrigation Projects in the Upper Region of Ghana	237
4.1.	The domestic community's colonial function: supplier of labour to the Southern capitalist sector	240
4.1.1.	The system of land tenure among the Frafra and Kasena	241
4.1.2.	The economic organization of the Frafra and the Kasena	245
4.1.3.	The domestic community's function as labour reserve for the Southern export economy	249
4.2.	The domestic community's post-colonial function: production of cash crops for the Southern economy	254
4.2.1.	The Vea and Tono Irrigation Projects	256
4.2.2.	The domestic community's forced entry into cash-crop production: expropriation of its food farms (and houses) in the Vea and Tono Project areas	270
4.3.	The domestic community's function as a source of labour for cash-crop production in the Vea Irrigation Project: 1968–1978/79	282
4.3.1.	Proletarians	283
4.3.2.	Outgrowers	293
4.4.	The domestic community as a controlled and supervised producer of cash crops at the Vea and Tono Irrigation Projects since 1977/78	299
4.5.	The domestic community: control or action?	314
4.6.	Conclusion	326
	General Conclusions	331
	Notes	341
	References	356
	Index	379