2.5.5 Bell (2004).....	52
2.5.6 Biberauer (2008, 2009).....	54
2.5.7 Concluding remarks	59
2.6 Conclusion	60
Chapter 3 Negative Indefinites	63
3.1 Introduction.....	63
3.2 Negative concord	66
3.3 Approaches to the analysis of negative indefinites	71
3.3.1 Negative indefinites as semantically non-negative.....	71
3.3.2 Negative indefinites as ambiguous.....	78

3.3.3	Negative indefinites as semantically negative	81
3.4	The status of negative indefinites in Afrikaans	85
3.5	Conclusion	88
Chapter 4	Optimality Theory and Negation	91
4.1	Introduction to Optimality Theory	91
4.1.1	Bidirectional optimization	99
4.1.2	Stochastic Optimality Theory	105
4.2	Negation in Optimality Theory	115
4.2.1	Markedness of negation	115
4.2.2	Expression and interpretation of negative indefinites	118
4.3	Conclusion	129
Chapter 5	Empirical evidence: corpus and experimental data	131
5.1	Introduction	131
5.2	Corpus Data	131
5.3	Perception experiment	143
5.3.1	DN vs. NC prosodic contour	145
5.3.2	Questionnaire	150
5.3.3	Participants	154
5.4	Results of the perception experiment	155
5.4.1	Results: acceptability judgements	156
5.4.2	Results: meaning judgements	171
5.4.3	Concluding remarks	186
5.5	Production experiment	188
5.5.1	Participants	189
5.5.2	Design of the experiment	189
5.5.3	Results of the prosodic analyses	191
5.5.4	Concluding remarks	195
5.6	Conclusion	196
Chapter 6	An analysis of multiple negative indefinites in Afrikaans	199
6.1	Introduction	199
6.2	Multiple indefinites in the scope of negation	199
6.2.1	A description of indefinites in the scope of negation	199
6.2.2	Empirical evidence of multiple negative indefinites in Afrikaans	205

6.3	A standard bidirectional OT account of multiple negative indefinites in Afrikaans.....	210
6.4	A stochastic OT account of multiple negative indefinites in Afrikaans.....	213
6.4.1	Generating two possible forms for expressing one meaning: asymmetric constraint overlap of *Neg and MaxNeg.....	213
6.4.2	Assigning two possible interpretations to one form: asymmetric constraint overlap of *Neg and IntNeg.....	216
6.4.3	Empirical support for asymmetric constraint overlap of *Neg and IntNeg.....	218
6.5	Bidirectional grammar of indefinites in the scope of negation in Afrikaans.....	221
6.5.1	Developing a bidirectional stochastic OT account of multiple negative indefinites in Afrikaans.....	221
6.5.2	Interpretation of multiple negative indefinite combinations in Afrikaans in an asymmetric bidirectional stochastic OT account.....	226
6.6	Conclusion	231
Chapter 7 More on negative indefinites in Afrikaans: the case of g'n and niks		235
7.1	Introduction.....	235
7.2	Negative substitution: an analysis of g'n as a sentential negator..	238
7.2.1	The use of g'n as a sentential negator.....	238
7.2.2	An information-structural account of non-canonical negation in Romance languages	242
7.2.3	An information-structural account of the use of g'n	246
7.2.4	The use of g'n in newspaper headlines.....	248
7.2.5	Concluding remarks	250
7.3	The nature and distribution of g'n niks in the corpus.....	251
7.3.1	Occurrences of negative indefinite combinations with g'n in the corpus	251
7.3.2	Establishing the difference between g'n and geen in negative indefinite combinations.....	254
7.3.3	Establishing the difference between g'n niks and other multiple negative indefinite combinations	256
7.3.4	The interpretation of negative indefinite combinations with g'n	262
7.3.5	Nature of the occurrences of g'n niks in the corpus	265

7.3.6	Concluding remarks	268
7.4	Negative reinforcement: an analysis of g'n as an intensifier	270
7.4.1	The use of g'n in negative indefinite combinations	270
7.4.2	Emphatic negation and Zeijlstra's (2007) EMNI's	271
7.4.3	G'n as an intensifier and the notion of emphasis	279
7.4.4	Negative reinforcement via substitution: niks	284
7.4.5	Concluding remarks	289
7.5	Conclusion	289
Chapter 8	Conclusion	291
