
Europe and Naval Arms Control in the Gorbachev Era

Edited by

Andreas Fürst, Volker Heise and Steven Miller

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

1992

Contents

Foreword	x
Preface	xii
Acknowledgements	xiii
Abbreviations and acronyms	xiv
Part I. Introduction
1. Europe and naval arms control in the Gorbachev era	3
Steven E. Miller
I. Introduction	3
II. The changing context	4
III. The continuing relevance	7
IV. Three levels of naval arms control	8
V. Europe's maritime regions	9
Part II. The Norwegian Sea
2. Naval arms control and the Norwegian Sea: a US perspective	15
William J. Durch
I. Introduction	15
II. Strategy, the Navy and arms control	15
III. US interests and the Norwegian Sea	20
IV. Changes in strategy: window for arms control?	22
V. Conclusions	39
Table 2.1. Potential naval arms control and CBMs	24
Table 2.2. US Navy fleet composition	31
Table 2.3. Soviet/Russian Navy fleet composition, 1990 and baseline 1997 estimates for warships of 1000 tonnes and greater full- load displacement	32
Table 2.4. US warship tonnages by type of notional combat group	33
Table 2.5. Allocation of US Navy combat ships to operational groups, for planning purposes	34
Table 2.6. Soviet/Russian Navy fleet composition, baseline 1997 versus reductions to a tonnage ceiling built around ten or nine US attack carrier battle groups	35
Table 2.7. Soviet/Russian Fleet and submarine force ratios for alternate arms control scenarios	37
Table 2.8. Soviet/Russian SSBN deployment rates and ratios of attack to ballistic missile submarines	38
Appendix 2A. Major NATO North Atlantic naval exercises, 1970–88	41

3. The Soviet Union, naval arms control and the Norwegian Sea	44
Alexei Arbatov
I. Introduction	44
II. Threat perceptions and planning assumptions of the Soviet military	46
III. Changing threat perceptions and missions of the Soviet Navy in the northern region	50
IV. Soviet naval arms control and CBM proposals	57
V. Opportunities for naval stability in the northern region	61
Appendix 3A. Overview of Soviet naval arms control proposals in the Gorbachev era	65
4. Naval arms control in the Norwegian Sea: a British perspective	67
Ian Anthony
I. Introduction	67
II. British attitudes to naval arms control	69
III. The role of the Norwegian Sea in British naval policy	73
IV. Options for change	76
V. Future naval policy	77
VI. The future British attitude towards naval arms control	80
Table 4.1. Main operational roles of the Royal Navy	73
5. Iceland, naval arms control and the Norwegian Sea	83
Albert Jónsson
I. Introduction	83
II. Icelandic naval arms control policy	83
III. The Iceland area	94
IV. Confidence-building measures	98
V. Structural arms control	102
VI. Conclusion	105
6. Norway and naval arms control: interests, policies and perspectives	107
John Kristen Skogan
I. Introduction	107
II. The naval arms control dilemma	107
III. Positive evaluations	108
IV. Norwegian reservations	113
Part III. The Baltic region
7. Naval arms control in the Baltic Sea: a Soviet perspective	125
Vladimir Kulagin
I. Introduction	125
II. Sources of naval confrontation	126

III. Naval capabilities in the Baltic	130
IV. The nuclear dimension	132
V. Naval arms control in the Baltic	134
8. Naval arms control in the Baltic region: a German perspective	138
Volker Heise
I. Introduction	138
II. Maritime interests in the Baltic	138
III. From threat perceptions to issues of concern	139
IV. NATO's Baltic posture	143
V. Prospects for arms control in the Baltic	145
VI. Evaluation of possible arms control measures in the Baltic	146
VII. The Baltic as a sea of peace	153
VIII. Structural perspectives	154
IX. Conclusion	156
9. Strategic developments and the impact of naval arms control in the Baltic region	158
Johan Tunberger and Robert Dalsjö
I. Introduction	158
II. Strategic interest and developments	160
III. Developments in the Baltic region	163
IV. Naval arms control in northern waters	167
V. The future impact of naval arms control measures	173
VI. Confidence building in the Baltic Sea	186
VII. Conclusion	187
Part IV. The Mediterranean region
10. Naval arms control in the Mediterranean: a Soviet perspective	193
Nadia Alexandrova-Arbatova
I. Introduction	193
II. The security situation in the Mediterranean	193
III. New elements in Soviet naval missions in the Mediterranean	196
IV. Problems of promoting security	202
Appendix 10A. The NATO-WTO naval balance in the Mediterranean Sea 1989	207
11. The United States and naval arms control in the Mediterranean	208
James L. Lacy
I. Introduction	208
II. The distant past	211
III. Cold war-era adjustments	213
IV. The naval balance	216

V. Soviet overtures for naval reductions	217
VI. The West's response	219
VII. Continuity and change	223
VIII. The naval arms control debate revisited	228
IX. The arms control options reconsidered	229
12. Naval arms control in the western Mediterranean: a Spanish perspective	232
Rafael L. Bardaji
I. Introduction	232
II. The case against structural naval disarmament	233
III. The case for naval CBMs: the Conference on Security and Co-operation in the Mediterranean (CSCM)	244
IV. Conclusions	248
Table 12.1. Military forces of the Maghreb countries, 1975-89	238
Table 12.2. Moroccan Air Force combat aircraft force structure, 1975-89	239
13. Prospects for naval arms control in the eastern Mediterranean	250
Athanassios G. Platias
I. Introduction	250
II. The strategic situation in the eastern Mediterranean	250
III. Naval arms control	259
IV. Conclusion	265
Figure 13.1 Possible distribution of territorial seas in the Aegean	257
Appendix 13A. Guidelines for the prevention of accidents and incidents on the high seas and in international airspace, Istanbul, 8 September 1988	267
Appendix 13B. Memorandum of understanding on confidence-building measures, Athens, 17 May 1988	268
14. Italy, the Mediterranean and naval arms control	269
Marco Carnovale
I. Introduction	269
II. Military significance	271
III. The political framework	282
IV. Legal aspects	285
V. Conclusions	287
15. Maritime power and naval arms control in the Mediterranean: implications in the Middle East context	289
Shai Feldman
I. Introduction	289
II. The rationale for naval arms control in the Middle East	290
III. Obstacles to regional naval arms control	291
IV. Confidence-building measures	299

16. Naval arms control in the southern Mediterranean: an Arab perspective	301
Abdel Monem Said Aly and Mohamed Kadry
I. Introduction	301
II. Threat perceptions	301
III. Arms control	304
IV. Arms control in the Mediterranean	311
V. Regional naval powers in the southern Mediterranean	315
VI. Prospects for arms control in the southern Mediterranean	321
Table 16.1. Comparison of naval power in the southern and eastern Mediterranean	317
Figure 16.1. Sinai demilitarized zones	307
 Annexe
Table 1. Naval forces in the Baltic Sea 1991	326
Table 2. Naval forces in the Norwegian Sea 1991	326
Table 3. Naval forces in the Mediterranean Sea 1991	327
 About the authors	329
 Index	333