

Anglo-Japanese Financial Relations

A Golden Tide

SIR FRED WARNER

Basil Blackwell

CONTENTS

Preface	xi
Part I: 1853–1946
1 Historical Background 1853–1868	1
2 Early Days 1858–1868	8
The British Trading Companies	8
The Arrival of the British Banks	14
The Strength of the British Presence in Japan	15
Early Banking Activities	16
Early Japanese Credit Systems	17
3 The New Japan 1868–1873	20
The Meiji Restoration: Views and Policies	20
Schooling, Training and Tutors	23
The First Foreign Loans	26
4 A Modern Capitalist Economy 1873–1894	31
Problems of Trade	31
A Banking System for Japan	33
Foreign Exchange: the Yokohama Specie Bank	37
A New Japanese Currency	39
The Shift of Financial Power	44
5 The Cost of Empire 1895–1914	46
Japan as a New World Power	46

Japanese State Loans 1897–1910	49
Japanese Credit in the International Markets	51
The Role of the London Group	53
British Loans for Japanese Industrial Development	56
6 Japanese Financial Development 1895–1914	62
Japan's External Balances	62
The Japanese Long-Term Credit Banks	66
Commercial Banking	69
Loans to China: Anglo-Japanese Rivalry	71
Anglo-American Rivalry	75
7 The First World War 1914–1918	79
General Consequences for Japan	79
Problems of Trade Finance	81
Council of India Bills	82
Japanese Loans to the Allies	84
The Japanese National Reserve	86
8 Between Two Wars 1918–1941	90
The New Balance	90
The Decline of the London Market as Lender to Japan	92
Banking and Investment	98
China and Manchuria	100
Recession and Isolation in Japan	103
Part II: 1946–1988
General Comment	111
9 Out of the Ashes 1945–1953	112
Japan in 1945	112
The American Occupation	113
The Repayment of Japan's Pre-war Loans	116
Britain Resumes Business with Japan	118
British Banks Return to Tokyo	120
Japanese Banks Return to London	123

10	The Rise of Industrial Japan 1953–1972	127
	Japan's Economic Miracle	127
	The Experience of British Banks in Tokyo	130
	First Steps to Liberalization	132
	Foreign Capital in Japan: Direct Investment	134
	Foreign Portfolio Investment in Japan	136
	The Japanese Presence in London	138
	The 'Nixon Shock'	140
11	International Bond Markets 1945–1988	145
	London as a Source of Capital 1945–1963	145
	Japan Enters the Eurodollar Market 1963	147
	Japan Becomes a Lender: Samurai Bonds 1970	150
	Other Japanese Bonds	154
	Japanese Warrants	155
	The Euroyen Bond Market 1977	157
12	Foreign Financial Dealings in Tokyo 1972–1988	162
	The British Presence	162
	Impact Loans	165
	Yen Loans	166
	Foreign Exchange Business	167
	The Government Bond Market	168
	Short-Term Money Markets	169
	Mergers and Acquisitions	169
	Venture Capital	171
	Fund and Portfolio Management	171
	Operations on the Stock Exchange	174
	Information and Advisory Services	177
13	Tokyo as a World Financial Centre 1972–1988	179
	The Background to Liberalization	179
	The Establishment of a CD Market 1979	181
	Revision of the Foreign Exchange Law 1980	182
	American Pressure: the Yen–Dollar Committee 1984	183
	Revaluation of the Yen: the Maekawa Report 1985/6	187

	The Tokyo Offshore Market 1986	189
	An Unfinished Process 1988	191
14	Japan in the City of London 1972–1988	194
	The Big Migration	194
	The Choice of London	196
	Treasury Activities	198
	The UK Interbank Market	198
	Lending to Non-UK Residents	199
	Floating Rate Notes	200
	The Swap Market	200
	Investment Banking	200
	Corporate Lending to UK Residents	202
	Securities Trading	203
	Zaiteku	204
15	Tokyo and London Compared 1988	208
	Tokyo	208
	London	213
	Part III: Past, Present and Future
16	Past	221
	Japanese Patterns	221
	British Patterns	226
17	Present	229
	Surplus and Deficit	229
	The Concept of Reciprocity	231
	Absorbing Chronic Imbalances	232
	Japan's Capital Exports	233
	The Yen as an International Currency	235
18	Future	237
	The State of Japan	237
	1992	241
	Financial Relations	243
	Bibliography	246
	Index	249