
Budgeting for the Military Sector in Africa

The Processes and Mechanisms of Control

Edited by

Wuyi Omitoogun and Eboe Hutchful

sipri

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

2006

Contents

Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xv
Abbreviations	xvii
1. Introduction	1
Wuyi Omitoogun
I. Background and rationale	1
II. The objectives and focus of the study	4
III. Methodology and scope of the study	7
IV. The structure of this book	12
V. A note on the study findings	13
Table 1.1. Military expenditure per capita in 2004 and as a share of gross domestic product in 2000–2003, by region and by income group	6
Table 1.2. Key background facts about Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa	10
2. A model for good practice in budgeting for the military sector	14
Nicole Ball and Len le Roux
I. Introduction	14
II. Good practice in the military budgetary process	14
III. Integrating the military budgetary process into government-wide processes	18
IV. Defence planning, programming and budgeting	29
V. Conclusions	37
Box 2.1. Ten principles of public expenditure management	16
Box 2.2. Ten principles of democratic governance in the security sector	18
Box 2.3. Information to be captured by a financial management information system	21
Box 2.4. The legislative capacity to oversee the military sector in West Africa	26
Box 2.5. Causes of deviations between budgeted and actual expenditure	27
Box 2.6. Components of the efficient use of resources	28
Box 2.7. Key elements of the defence plan	30
Box 2.8. Examples of defence administration objectives	31
Box 2.9. Examples of defence commitments objectives	32
Box 2.10. Examples of typical defence programmes	33

Box 2.11.	Examples of typical joint force-support objectives	34
Figure 2.1.	A generic financial management process for the security sector	20
Figure 2.2.	Security environment assessment	22
Figure 2.3.	The process for conducting defence reviews and developing defence policy frameworks	24
Table 2.1.	The typical annual budget cycle	36
Appendix 2A. Good practice in military procurement and acquisition		38
Box 2A.1.	A generic procurement process	40
Appendix 2B. Strategic defence planning		41
Figure 2B.1.	Defence variables: the ends, ways and means of defence	42
Appendix 2C. A practical model for the determinations of optimal defence capabilities		43
Box 2C.1.	Optimizing force designs	44
Table 2C.1.	Selected practical challenges facing defence planning processes	46
3. Ethiopia		48
Said Adejumobi and Mesfin Binega
I.	Introduction and background	48
II.	The military sector and the political economy of military expenditure in Ethiopia	51
III.	The national budgetary process	55
IV.	The military budgetary process	60
V.	Assessing the military budgetary process	64
VI.	Issues arising from the study	69
VII.	Conclusions	71
Figure 3.1.	The military budgetary process in Ethiopia	62
Table 3.1.	The distribution of power between the central and regional governments of Ethiopia	50
Table 3.2.	Estimated strength of active military forces of countries in the Horn of Africa, 1997–2004	52
Table 3.3.	Military expenditure of Ethiopia, 1990–2004	54
Table 3.4.	The financial calendar of the Ethiopian Ministry of National Defence	63
Table 3.5.	Ethiopian military budget appropriation by sub-programme, 1991/92–2002/2003	66
4. Ghana		72
Eboe Hutchful
I.	Introduction and background	72
II.	The military sector	74
III.	The national budgetary process	76
IV.	The military budgetary process	81
V.	Assessment of the military budgetary process	89
VI.	Conclusions	97

Table 4.1.	Military expenditure of Ghana, 1990–2004	74
Table 4.2.	Timetable for the preparation of the Ghanaian budget for financial year 2003	80
5. Kenya		100
	Julius Karangi and Adedeji Ebo
	I. Introduction and background	100
	II. The military sector	102
	III. The national budgetary process	104
	IV. The military budgetary process	107
	V. Assessment of the military budgetary process	116
	VI. Conclusions and recommendations	119
Figure 5.1.	Actors in the Kenyan national budgetary framework	106
Table 5.1.	Military expenditure of Kenya, 1990–2004	108
Table 5.2.	Military expenditure by Kenya and its neighbours as a share of gross domestic product, 1991–99	110
6. Mali		122
	Anatole Ayissi and Nouhoum Sangaré
	I. Introduction and background	122
	II. The security sector	123
	III. The national budgetary framework and military expenditure	125
	IV. The military budgetary process	127
	V. Assessment of the military budgetary process: legal and de facto procedures	131
	VI. Conclusions and recommendations	135
Table 6.1.	Military expenditure of Mali, 1990–2004	124
Table 6.2.	Principal chapters in the budget of the Malian armed and security forces, 2002	126
Table 6.3.	Deviation of actual military expenditure from budgeted expenditure in Mali, 1999–2003	132
7. Mozambique		137
	Lázaro Macuácuá
	I. Introduction and background	137
	II. The defence and security sector	139
	III. The national budgetary process	144
	IV. The military planning and budgetary process	147
	V. Assessment of the military budgetary process	149
	VI. Conclusions and recommendations	152
Figure 7.1.	The structure of the Mozambican Ministry of National Defence	142
Table 7.1.	Directorates of the Mozambican Ministry of National Defence and their functions	140
Table 7.2.	Military expenditure of Mozambique, 1990–2004	146

Table 7.3.	Military assistance received by Mozambique from select donors, 1999–2002	147
8. Nigeria		154
	Wuyi Omitoogun and Tunde Oduntan
	I. Introduction and background	154
	II. The military sector	155
	III. The national budgetary process	158
	IV. The military budgetary process	165
	V. The major weaknesses of the military budgetary process	169
	VI. Conclusions and recommendations	178
Box 8.1.	Extracts from Nigeria's draft National Defence Policy, 2001	170
Table 8.1.	Military expenditure of Nigeria, 1990–2004	156
Table 8.2.	A comparison of the Nigerian Ministry of Defence's proposed budget, government-announced estimates and actual releases from the government, 1999–2002	172
Table 8.3.	The composition of Nigeria's military expenditure, 1999–2005	174
9. Sierra Leone		180
	Osman Gbla
	I. Introduction and background	180
	II. The security sector	181
	III. The national budgetary process	183
	IV. The military budgetary process	187
	V. Assessment of the military budgetary process	192
	VI. Conclusions and recommendations	195
Table 9.1.	Sierra Leone military expenditure for financial years 2002–2004	188
Table 9.2.	Military expenditure of Sierra Leone, 1990–2004	190
10. South Africa		197
	Len le Roux
	I. Introduction and background	197
	II. The Department of Defence	199
	III. The national financial framework	202
	IV. The military planning and budgetary process	207
	V. Assessment of the military budgetary process	217
	VI. Conclusions and recommendations	224
Figure 10.1.	Structure of the South African Department of Defence	200
Figure 10.2.	The South African budgetary process for financial year 2003/2004	206
Figure 10.3.	The South African Department of Defence budgetary process for a financial year (1 April–31 March)	210
Table 10.1.	Military expenditure of South Africa, 1990–2004	201

Table 10.2.	Estimated South African military expenditure by programme for the Medium-Term Expenditure Framework period of financial years 2003/2004–2005/2006	208
Table 10.3.	Estimated South African military expenditure by standard expenditure item for the Medium-Term Expenditure Framework period of financial years 2003/2004–2005/2006	209
Table 10.4.	Budgeted and actual South African military expenditure by programme for financial year 2003/2004	222
Table 10.5.	Budgeted and actual South African military expenditure by standard expenditure item for financial year 2003/2004	223
11. A synthesis of the country studies		226
Wuyi Omitoogun
I.	Introduction	226
II.	The country studies in the context of the good practices framework	226
III.	Categorizing the case studies	251
IV.	Explaining the level of adherence to good practice principles	256
V.	Summary and conclusions	263
Box 11.1.	The medium-term expenditure framework	234
Table 11.1.	Defence planning, programming and budgeting in Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa, 2003	228
Table 11.2.	Crucial steps in military expenditure management in Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa: a summary of the country reports	230
Table 11.3.	Adherence to principles of public expenditure management in the formulation phase of military budgeting by Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa	236
Table 11.4.	Adherence to principles of public expenditure management in the approval phase of military budgeting by Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa	238
Table 11.5.	Adherence to principles of public expenditure management in the implementation phase of military budgeting by Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa	240
Table 11.6.	Adherence to principles of public expenditure management in the auditing phase of military budgeting by Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa	242

Table 11.7. The deviation between the approved budget and actual expenditure on the military sector in Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and South Africa, 1999–2003	252
12. Recommendations	265
Wuyi Omitoogun and Eboe Hutchful
I. Introduction	265
II. Recommendations to national governments	265
III. Recommendations to the international community	272
About the authors	277
Index	281