

The Beginning of the World in Renaissance Jewish Thought

Ma'aseh Bereshit in Italian Jewish Philosophy and Kabbalah, 1492–1535

By

Brian Ogren

BRILL

LEIDEN | BOSTON

Contents

Acknowledgements IX

Introduction: In the Beginning 1

PART 1

Bereshit—The Wisdom of the Beginning

- 1 On the Wisdom of Language—Yohanan Alemanno on the Word of God and the Simulacrum of Creation 25
- 2 On the Wisdom of Christ—Giovanni Pico della Mirandola on the Truth of the Son and the Creation of the World 44
- 3 On the Wisdom of Angels—Isaac Abravanel on the Separate Intellects, Bodies, and the Garments of Creation 60
- 4 On the Wisdom of Beauty—Leone Ebreo on Art and Creation 77

PART 2

Tohu Va-Vohu—Astounding and Substantial Beginnings

- 5 Hylomorphic Time—Yohanan Alemanno on Form, Matter, and the Days of Creation 99
- 6 Edifices and Days—Giovanni Pico della Mirandola on Formation, Teshuvah, and the Return to Christ 117
- 7 Ex-Nihilo Creation—Isaac Abravanel on the Formation of the World, Evil, and Peace 134
- 8 Chaos and Divine Spirit—Leone Ebreo on Greek Mythology, Jewish Lore, and the Gendered Creation of the Universe 151

Concluding Remarks: *On Sources and Influences in Relation to
"The Beginning" 169

Bibliography 181

Index 191