

The Royal Society of London

Years of Reform, 1827–1847

Mary Louise Gleason

Garland Publishing, Inc.
New York & London
1991

TABLE OF CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGE
I. THE ROYAL SOCIETY IN THE EARLY NINETEENTH CENTURY	1
II. SCIENCE AND THE SCIENTIFIC COMMUNITY IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY	23
A. The Provincial Societies	23
1. The Lit and Phils	23
2. University of Edinburgh and the Academy of Physics	28
B. The State of English Mathematics in the Early Years of the Nineteenth Century	32
C. Specialized Societies	38
1. The Emergence of the Specialized Societies	38
2. The Foundation of the Geological Society	42
3. The Astronomical Society	52
4. The Significance of the Specialized Societies	56
III. THE ROYAL SOCIETY IN THE EARLY YEARS OF THE NINETEENTH CENTURY	60
A. Banks and the Royal Society	60
1. Banks and His Critics	60
2. In Praise of Banks	68
B. The End of an Era and the Beginning of a New Age	73
1. The Death of Banks and the Election of Davy	73
2. The Election of Humphry Davy	77
C. Davy as President	83
1. A Man of Science in the Chair	83
2. Davy and the Efforts at Reform	86
3. The Relationship Between the Society and the Government	90
4. The Zoological Society	96

CHAPTERPage

D.	Davy and the Society: An Evaluation	98
IV.	FRUSTRATION AND DISCONTENT: AN ATTEMPT AT REFORM: 1827	105
A.	Davy and Babbage	105
	1. Babbage and His Criticism of Davy	105
	2. Davy's Discourses	113
B.	Attempt at Reform: 1827	118
	1. The Formation of the Wollaston Committee	118
	2. Suggestions for Reform	122
	3. The Fate of the Wollaston Committee Report	127
C.	The Election of 1827	131
	1. Gilbert's Overtures to Peel	131
	2. Further Attempts to Persuade Peel	137
	3. Peel's Withdrawal from the Race	147
D.	Gilbert as President of the Royal Society and the Fate of the Wollaston Committee Report	156
V.	THE DECLINE OF SCIENCE	167
A.	Rumblings of Discontent	167
	1. English Science in the 1820's	167
	2. Science on the Continent	173
	3. Public Criticism of the State of Science and the Royal Society	176
B.	Babbage and the Inspiration for the Book	180
	1. Babbage and His Reflections	180
	2. In Support of Babbage's Ideas	184
C.	Patronage of Science by Education and the State	191
	1. Science and Education	191
	2. Science and Government	205
D.	Honors and Rewards for Men of Science	212

CHAPTER	PAGE
VI. THE ROYAL SOCIETY IN 1830	238
A. Critical Evaluations of the Society	238
1. The Admission Policies and the Prestige of Being "F.R.S."	238
2. Granville's Assessment of the Royal Society	243
3. The Award System of the Royal Society	252
4. Leadership in the Society	255
B. The President: Scientist or Non-Scientist	265
1. Gilbert Under Attack	265
2. Gilbert and A Successor	270
3. Dissension Within the Ranks	277
C. Assessment and Reform	288
VII. AFTERMATH OF DISCONTENT	294
A. A Patron in the Chair	294
1. The Election of 1830	294
2. Sussex and Reform	304
3. Reactions to the York Meeting	311
B. The British Association for the Advancement of Science	320
1. Origin and Inspiration	320
2. The Organization of the BAAS	325
3. Reactions to the York Meeting	330
C. The 1830 Election in Retrospect	333
D. Resignation of Sussex	338
1. Limitation of Fellows and Periodical Presidency	338
2. Northampton as President	344
VIII. REFORM OF THE ROYAL SOCIETY	353
A. The Road to Reform	353
1. Formation of the Charter Revision Committee	353
2. Charter Revision Committee	359

CHAPTER	PAGE
3. Report of the Charter Revision Committee	365
4. Enactment of the Charter Revision Committee's Report	375
B. Philosophical Club	380
1. Its Origins and Formation	380
2. The Objectives of the Philosophical Club	385
C. Aftermath of Reform	392
1. Royal Medals	392
2. Northampton Resigns	396
3. The Office of the Secretary	404
4. Reform of the Council	407
5. Government Grant	412
D. Reform of the Royal Society: A Retrospective	416
FOOTNOTES	431
BIBLIOGRAPHY	493