

INDUSTRIALIZATION AND EMPLOYMENT IN DEVELOPING COUNTRIES

A COMPARATIVE STUDY

KANHAYA L. GUPTA

ROUTLEDGE
London and New York

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
List of Tables	ix
List of Figures	xv
<hr/>
1 Introduction	1
2 Statistical Overview	5
2.1 The sectoral classifications used	5
2.2 Inter-sectoral comparisons	5
2.3 Intra-sectoral comparisons	11
2.4 India and South Korea	18
3 Factor Price Behaviour	27
3.1 The evidence	27
3.2 Are the observed factor prices distorted?	34
4 Survey of Studies on Demand for Labour	41
4.1 Methodology	41
4.2 Studies surveyed	45
4.3 Effects of factor prices	50
4.4 Effects of output	54
4.5 Concluding remarks	56
5 The Models, Estimation Issues and the Data	57
5.1 The models	57
5.2 Estimation issues	62
5.3 The data	65
6 Demand for Production Workers: Time-series Evidence	67
6.1 A word on methodology	67
6.2 The estimates	68
6.2.1 Three-digit industries	68
6.2.2 Total manufacturing	80
6.3 Expectational lags	81
6.4 Some implications	85
7 Demand for Production Workers: Pooled Time-series, Cross-section Evidence	93
7.1 Sensitivity of the estimates to alternate estimators and expectations schemes	93
7.2 Intra-country, inter-sectoral comparisons	98
7.3 Inter-country, intra-sectoral comparisons	104
7.3.1 Response to changes in real wages	104

7.3.2	Response to changes in output	105
7.4	Concluding Remarks	106
8	Interrelated Demand Functions: Pooled Time-series, Cross-section Evidence	108
8.1	The estimates	108
8.1.1	General remarks	108
8.1.2	Does the 'Full' model fit better?	110
8.1.3	How well does the model fit?	114
8.2	Short-term Response to Factor Prices	115
8.2.1	Direct effect of own wage rate	115
8.2.2	Cross-effects of wage rates	117
8.2.3	Effects of the user cost of capital	117
8.3	Effects of changes in output	118
8.4	On the implications of the adjustment coefficients	119
8.4.1	Own adjustment coefficients	119
8.4.2	Cross-adjustment coefficients	121
8.5	Long-run elasticities	122
8.6	Concluding observations	124
9	Cost of Factor Price Distortions	126
9.1	Extent of factor price distortions: methodology	126
9.2	Extent of factor price distortions: some estimates	128
9.3	Cost of factor price distortions	137
10	Policy Implications	141
10.1	Role of wage policy and output expansion	141
10.2	Dynamic analysis: India and South Korea	149
10.3	Concluding remarks	167
11	Conclusion	169
11.1	Methodology, major findings and policy implications	169
11.2	Suggestions for further work	171
<hr/>
	Appendix A Inter-sectoral Statistics	173
	Appendix B Time-series Estimates with Naïve Expectations	180
	Appendix C Detailed Pooled Time-series, Cross-section Results	184
	Selected Bibliography	197
	Index	203