

GERMAN FOREIGN AND DEFENCE POLICY AFTER UNIFICATION

Lothar Gutjahr

Translation by Lothar Gutjahr and Paul Addison

Pinter Publishers
London and New York

Distributed in the USA and Canada
by St. Martin's Press Inc.

Contents

List of abbreviations	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
1. Introduction	1
2. The changing international context	5
2.1 Beyond Yalta – basic features of the new order	5
2.2 Decline of American hegemony versus normalisation	9
2.3 Western European integration	11
2.4 After the Iron Curtain	14
2.5 Challenges and challengers	16
3. Germany in the international system	21
3.1 Basic decisions I: integration into the West and reunification	21
3.2 Basic decisions II: Ostpolitik and economic expansion	26
4. Conservative foreign and defence policy	37
4.1 An attempted about-turn: 1982–87	37
4.2 Building a world political power	41
4.3 The policy of West-Europeanisation	43
4.4 Partner in leadership – the United States	46
4.5 New roles for NATO and the Bundeswehr	48
4.6 Eastern Europe: from enemy to periphery	51
4.7 Strands of security thinking within the CDU	54
4.8 Bavarian Conservatives (CSU) and their foreign policy	66
5. The FDP's security policy	80
5.1 Origins of Genscherism	80
5.2 The policy of responsibility before and after unification	83

5.3 Western security and pan-European perspectives	86
5.4 Germany, Europe and the new world order	94
6. Rethinking social democratic security concepts	107
6.1 From Détente to Common Security	107
6.2 Beyond Ostpolitik	111
6.3 Civilising the conflicts	115
6.4 An Atlantic-Eurasian zone of demilitarisation	120
6.5 The United States of Europe	125
6.6 Global responsibilities	129
6.7 Strands of security thinking within the SPD	135
7. Alternatives to realism or alternate realities?	154
7.1 Post-industrialism and peace: the Green Party	154
7.2 The PDS: anti-imperialism in one country	162
8. Basic decisions III: conclusions for the 1990s	175
Bibliography	183
Documents	206
Index	250