

The Jew in Czech and Slovak Imagination, 1938–89

Antisemitism, the Holocaust, and Zionism

By

Hana Kubátová
Jan Láníček

BRILL

LEIDEN | BOSTON

Contents

Acknowledgements	VII
Introduction	1
Objectives, Terminology and Approach	9
1 The Public Image of the 'Jew' during the War	14
Czechs and Slovaks Picture Each Other	17
The 'Jew' and 1938	19
Film	23
'Kohn Greets Sara': Radio Waves and the Image of the Jew	27
Metaphors and Allegories of the 'Jew' in the Press	39
2 The 'Jew' in the Popular Opinion	60
Collaboration in the Protectorate and Slovakia	62
Methodology	79
The Regime in the Protectorate and in 'Independent' Slovakia	88
Robbery	93
The Breaking Point	99
Return of the Jews	113
3 The 'Jew' as a Reminder	123
Tales of Suffering	128
'We Know That You Are Not Guilty!': Origins of the Postwar Myths	132
Heroes and Cowards	138
Collaboration and Guilt	150
Jews as Collaborators	153
4 When They Write 'Zionist', They Mean 'Jew'	169
Czechoslovakia and Zionism until the Communist Takeover	172
Zionism as a Progressive Force?	183
The 'Jew' as a Zionist	192
Zionist Conspiracy with a 'Human Face'	212
Conclusion	238
Bibliography	243
Index	267