

THE OTHER SIDE OF ARMS CONTROL

Soviet Objectives in the Gorbachev Era

Alan B. Sherr

Boston

UNWIN HYMAN

London Sydney Wellington

Contents

Preface	page xiii
1 Soviet Foreign Policy Objectives	1
Gorbachev's New Concepts	2
Practical Implications of the New Ways of Thinking	15
Notes	39
2 Soviet Economic Objectives	49
Avoiding Inefficient Allocations of Resources to Nuclear Arms	50
Maximizing Political Support for Structural Economic Reform	65
Notes	71
3 Soviet Military Objectives	77
The Evolution of Soviet Military Doctrine	77
Nuclear Arms Control Objectives	95
Notes	101
4 Nuclear Arms Control Decision Making in the Soviet Union	107
Psychological Aspects of Soviet Decision Making	107
Organizational Aspects of Soviet Decision Making	113
Notes	131
5 Nuclear Arms Control in Europe	137
The Background Issues	139
The Foreground Issues	146
Implications of the INF Treaty	168
Notes	172
6 Strategic Offensive Nuclear Arms Control	178
The Pre-Gorbachev Period	178
The Gorbachev Period	193
Appendix — A Baseline for Arms Control Decision Making Based on a "Min-Max" Typology	201
Notes	205

7 Strategic Defensive Nuclear Arms Control	212
Conceptualizations of the ABM Treaty	212
Conceptualizations of the SDI	219
Possible Approaches to Agreement	225
Notes	237
8 Verification	242
The Post-World War II Era	244
The Late 1960s to Mid-1980s	248
The Gorbachev Phase	260
Notes	272
9 Conclusion and Beginning	277
Global Trends: A New World Requires New Perspectives	277
The Soviets Want and Need Western Cooperation	280
Looking Toward the Future	284
Notes	294
Bibliography	298
Index	313