

Structural Adjustment and Mass Poverty in Ghana

KWABENA DONKOR

Ashgate

Aldershot • Brookfield USA • Singapore • Sydney

0 306 341 500
0 306 341 501

Contents

Tables	vi
Acknowledgements	ix
Foreword by Dr. Noel Tagoe	x
1 Introduction	1
Part One Historical development
2 Self government to the second republic	9
3 Accelerated decline 1972 - 1983	77
Part Two Structural adjustment and the example of Ghana
4 A theory of structural adjustment	97
5 Stages in the management of Ghana's economic reform	115
6 Agriculture and other sectoral problems	162
7 A general critique of adjustment in Ghana, 1983 - 1995	190
Part Three Poverty in Ghana: The case for a new development strategy
8 Poverty in Ghana	206
9 Conclusion	243
Bibliography	254

Tables

Table 2.1	Cocoa production	11
Table 2.2	Cocoa board purchases	12
Table 2.3	Commodity trade: Imports and exports	16
Table 2.4	Uses of GDP	22
Table 2.5	Central government revenue and expenditure	24
Table 2.6	Capital allocation under the second Five Year Plan	29
Table 2.7	Funding of the Volta dam hydro-electric project	37
Table 2.8	Proportionate distribution of government investment under various plans	43
Table 2.9	Breakdown of private sector investment	44
Table 2.10	Investment breakdown	44
Table 2.11	Financing of Ghana's investment bill	45
Table 2.12	Trade with socialist countries	54
Table 2.13	Export of cocoa to USSR	55
Table 2.14	Distribution of income in Ghana	56
Table 2.15	Summary of external debt	58
Table 2.16	A sectoral distribution of public investment	67
Table 2.17	Textiles, weaving apparel and footwear industries	68
Table 2.18	Income distribution	70
Table 3.1	Official and parallel foreign exchange rates and selected currencies	83
Table 3.2	Government revenue and budgetary overrun in relation to GDP estimates	84
Table 3.3	Major Ghanaian export items	87
Table 3.4	Cocoa and food prices indices	88
Table 3.5	Production of principal crops	88