

CICERO
CATO MAIOR
DE SENECTUTE

EDITED WITH INTRODUCTION
AND COMMENTARY

BY

J. G. F. POWELL

University of Newcastle upon Tyne

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York New Rochelle Melbourne Sydney

CONTENTS

|  |          |
|--|----------|
| Preface   | page vii |
| INTRODUCTION   | I        |
| I The literary character of the Cato                            | I        |
| (a) Circumstances of composition, andgeneral character of the work | I        |
| (b) The dialogue form  | 5        |
| (c) Rhetorical features  | 9        |
| (d) The popular philosophical tradition                                | 12       |
| (e) The Roman setting and historicalbackground                     | 16       |
| (f) Language and style   | 22       |
| II Old age in the philosophic tradition                                | 24       |
| (a) Philosophical writing on old age beforeCicero                  | 24       |
| (b) The later tradition  | 27       |
| III The text and the manuscripts                                       | 30       |
| (a) The manuscript tradition   | 30       |
| (b) Testimonia to the text in ancientgrammarians, etc.             | 44       |
| (c) The present text and apparatus                                     | 48       |
| TEXT   | 55       |
| COMMENTARY   | 93       |
| APPENDICES   | 267      |
| 1 The date of composition  | 267      |
| 2 Aristo Chius or Aristo Ceus?   | 269      |
| 3 The Cato as a historical source                               | 273      |
| BIBLIOGRAPHY   | 280      |
| INDEX  | 288      |