

Land Reform in Russia
1906–1917

Peasant Responses to Stolypin's Project of Rural Transformation

JUDITH PALLOT

CLARENDON PRESS · OXFORD

1999

CONTENTS

List of Plates	ix
List of Figures	x
List of Tables	xi
A Note on Archives	xiii
Glossary of Terms	xv
1 Introduction	1
Modernization from above	2
Reform theory and practice	6
The 'new history' of the Russian peasantry	15
Towards a model of peasant interaction with the Stolypin Reform	19
The structure of this book	27
2 The Land Reform as Administrative Utopia	31
The institutional and legal setting	34
'A liking for squares'	37
Diverging views at the centre	43
Exhibiting the Reform	48
Post-1910 reinterpretations of the Reform	61
3 Open Fields, Scattered Strips, and Repartitions	69
The economic utility of fragmentation and repartition in Russia's land communes	75
Strip widening and land consolidation in the commune	85
Differentiation in the commune	90
4 Free Riders and Village-Wide Consolidations	95
The Reform takes off	95
Title changes: fixing inequality in the commune	105
'Pioneer husbandmen'—individual separations from the commune	113
The 'free-rider problem' and the development of community-wide enclosures	117

5	'The Government is for us, Otrubniki'	127
	Land settlement officials in the provinces	127
	Capturing peasants for the reform	133
	Over-zealousness at the local level	138
	Intimidation and force	143
	Land settlement commissions and the quality of enclosed farms	146
6	Everyday Forms of Resistance to the Stolypin Reform	156
	Resistance in the middle ground	161
	Everyday means of resisting individual separations	166
	Peasant collective institutions and resistance to enclosure	171
	Revealing the hidden transcript	180
	Heroes and villains	184
7	Peasant Modification and Adaptation of the Reform	189
	The numerical results	190
	The impact of title changes in the commune	194
	The impact of land settlement projects on land-holding practices in the commune	201
	Fictitious khutora	213
	The stability of the new land-holding forms	217
8	Farming in the Immediate Post-Enclosure Years	219
	The costs of consolidating allotment land	219
	The pasture question	224
	Lessons from pre-1906 khutora	230
	Arable husbandry on Stolypin's farms	233
	Agricultural aid to enclosed farmers	241
	Conclusion	248
	Index	253