

The Chemistry of Regime Formation:
Explaining International Cooperation for a Comprehensive Ban on Chemical Weapons

Thomas Bernauer

UNIDIR

United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research

Dartmouth

Aldershot - Brookfield USA - Hong Kong - Singapore - Sydney

Table of Contents

	Page
Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
From a Ban on Use to a Ban on Possession	1
The Practical and Theoretical Significance of Studying International
Cooperation in the Field of Chemical Warfare Control	4
The Driving Forces in Chemical Disarmament
(What the Study Explains)	5
Regime Analysis as the Conceptual Framework	9
Level of Analysis, Methodology and Data	11
From a Fragmented Towards a Comprehensive International Regime	12
The Willingness of States to Cooperate	13
Capabilities, Dependence and Regime Demand	13
Chemical Warfare Control as a Problem of Collective Action	14
Principal Driving Forces and Cross-Cutting Factors in Chemical
Warfare Control: A Framework for Further Research	15
The Path Ahead	16
Chapter 1 The Control and Disarmament of Chemical Weapons	17
From a Cultural Code to Legal Constraints	17
The 1925 Geneva Protocol	18
Chemical Warfare in the 1930s and 1940s	19
Setting the Agenda: Renewed Attention to the Question of Chemical and Biological Weapons	20
Making the Geneva Protocol More Effective	22
Conclusion of the Biological Weapons Convention	24
Negotiations on a Chemical Weapons Convention: Principal
Developments from 1972 to 1992	25
Scope of the CW Convention	30
Compliance Mechanisms	33
North-South Issues	40
Chapter 2 From a Fragmented to a Comprehensive International
Regime	45
2.1 Regime-Analysis: Conceptual Framework or Theory?	45
2.2 Chemical Warfare Control Through an International Regime	50
2.3 The Making of the Comprehensive Chemical Warfare Control
Regime: Structure and Process	59

Chapter 3	The Framework of Analysis	77
3.1	Regime Analysis and Foreign Policy Interest Profiles: What the Study Explains	77
3.2	How to Explain Regime Formation in Chemical Warfare Control? ..	81
3.3	Correlation or Causation?	86
3.4	The Analysis of Beliefs and Behavioural Intentions	86
3.5	Interviews as the Principal Source of Data	92
3.6	The Sample	95
Chapter 4	Cooperation with Regard to the Comprehensive Regime	97
4.1	The Expected Degree of Satisfaction with the Results of the Negotiations	98
4.2	Preferences Concerning the Relationship Between National Means of Self-Reliance and International Cooperation	103
4.3	The Perceived Urgency of Reaching the Comprehensive Regime ..	109
4.4	The Conditionality of Cooperation	111
4.5	Preferences for Collective Procedures	115
4.6	The Five Dimensions of the Willingness to Cooperate Compared ..	119
Chapter 5	A Structural Explanation of Regime Demand: Capabilities, Dependence, and the Willingness of States to Cooperate	121
5.1	Structural Explanations in Regime-Analysis	121
5.2	Capabilities and the Willingness of States to Cooperate	126
5.3	Dependence and the Willingness to Cooperate	154
5.4	Comparing the Influence of the Explanatory Variables: A Structural Model	190
5.5	Conclusion	204
Chapter 6	Chemical Warfare Control as a Problem of Collective Action	205
6.1	Collective Action and Collective Dilemma: Game and Public Goods Theory and Problems of International Cooperation	206
6.2	Is Chemical Warfare Control Characterized by a Collective Dilemma?	211
6.3	Communication and Cooperation: the Problem of Monitoring and Verification under the Comprehensive Regime	214
6.4	Costs and Benefits of Cooperating in the Comprehensive Regime	247
6.5	Controlling Military Capability, Economic Capability and Political Group: An Interaction-related Model	309

Chapter 7	Integrating Structural, Interaction-related and Cognitive Explanations in a Dynamic Analysis of Regime Formation: A Framework for Further Research	319
	7.1 The Principal Driving Forces: Structural Factors and Preferences	321
	7.2 Cross-Cutting Factors: Leadership, Context and Knowledge	332
	7.3 Towards a Dynamic Model of Regime Formation	374
Chapter 8	Comprehensive Regime or Incremental Approach: The Path Ahead	375
	Comprehensive Regime	376
	Incremental Solutions	378
	Any Solution is Likely to Be Second-Best	381
Epilogue	383
Annexes	387
	Annexe I Abbreviations and Acronyms	387
	Annexe II Chemical Warfare Control Arrangements	389
	Annexe III Interview Methodology and Questionnaire	399
	Annexe IV Main Variables Used in the Analysis	423
	Annexe V Rank Correlations for Variables Y-1 to Y-5	429
	Annexe VI Rank Correlations for Chapter 5	431
	Annexe VII Rank Correlations for Chapter 6	439
	Annexe VIII List of Figures and Tables	449
References	455
UNIDIR publications	475