TABLE OF CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS xi

1 INTRODUCTION

1. Particular properties 1
   1.1 Theoretical background 3
   1.2 Theoretical framework 5
   1.3 The book 7

2 TROPES

1. What is it to be a trope? 8
2. Simple 11
3. Particular 16
4. Abstract 21

3 METAPHYSICS

1. Setting the general framework 25
2. The aim of investigation 26
   2.1 Subject matter 26
   2.2 Goal 29
3. The method of investigation 30
   3.1 Whitehead on metaphysics 32
   3.2 The method of discovery 33
4. Metaphysics and science 35
5. The success of investigation 36

4 TRUTH-MAKING

1. Metaphysics and language 37
2. Making true 39
   2.1 Entailment 41

3. Truth bearers 42
4. Logical Atomism 42
4.1 What is an atomic proposition? 44
4.2 Working out the atomistic hypothesis 46
5. Truth-maker theory and tropes 53
5.1 Propositions ostensibly about things 54
5.2 Propositions ostensibly about universals 56

5 THE PROBLEM OF UNIVERSALISATION

1. The problem of universalisation introduced 59
1.1 Two problems distinguished 59
1.2 What the problem is and what it is not 61
1.3 Constructing universality 65
2. A first attempt: the unity is primitive 65
2.1 Stout and distributive unity 66
2.2 Some of Armstrong's arguments against class-nominalism disarmed 68
2.3 More serious problems for class-primitivism 74
2.4 Summary 77
3. A second attempt: resemblance 78
3.1 Two presuppositions 78
3.2 Degrees of resemblance 80
3.3 Same but different 81
3.4 Is resemblance internal or external? 87
3.5 Ontologically characterising exact resemblance 94
3.6 A first alternative: exact resemblance as an underived relation 94
3.7 A second alternative: exact resemblance as a non-relational tie 104
3.8 A third alternative: exact resemblance as a pseudo-addition 109
3.9 Summary 115

6 THE PROBLEM OF THING-CONSTRUCTION

1. The problem of thing-construction introduced 117
1.1 What is it to be a thing? 119
1.2 Constructing things 123
2. The trope-substrate approach 123
3. The trope-bundle approach 127

3.1 Compresence 127
3.2 Is compresence internal or external? 129
3.3 Ontologically characterising compresence 134
4. Bradley and the relation regress 134
4.1 Avoiding relation regress 139
4.2 Route one: compresence is not a 'true' relation 140
4.3 Route two: the regress is not vicious 161
4.4 Route three: relations necessarily relate 163
5. Are compresent bundles things? 167
5.1 Stability 168
6. More to be said? 175
