

The Australian economy in the long run

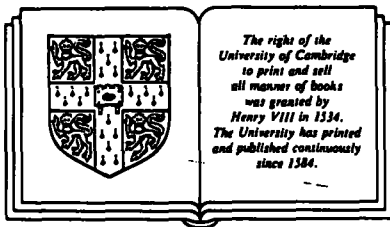

Edited by

RODNEY MADDOCK

Universidad de Antioquia
(formerly at Australian National University) and

IAN W. McLEAN

University of Adelaide

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York New Rochelle Melbourne Sydney

Contents

Acknowledgements	page ix
List of contributors	x
Editors' note	xi
Introduction	1
1 The Australian economy in the very long run	5
Rodney Maddock and Ian W. McLean
1.1 The historical context	5
1.2 Australian economic growth before 1900	8
1.3 Long-run economic performance 1861–1981	13
1.4 Salient features of the economy since 1900	18
PART I: The macroeconomy
2 Population and Australian economic development 1900–1930	33
David Pope
2.1 Growth and structural change	34
2.2 Australia's external transactions	41
2.3 Economic policy: goals and instruments	46
2.4 Problems with economic policy	49
2.5 Conclusions	57
3 The depression of the 1930s	61
Tom Valentine
3.1 The course of the depression	62
3.2 The causes of the depression	66
3.3 The recovery	72
3.4 Conclusion	76
4 The long boom 1940–1970	79
Rodney Maddock
4.1 What caused the boom?	80
4.2 Anatomy of the long boom	84

4.3	Economic incidents	92
4.4	Conclusion	102
5	The end of the long boom	106
	Adrian Pagan
5.1	Some theory	109
5.2	The terminal phase of the long boom: 1966/7–1972/3	111
5.3	The aftermath of the long boom: 1973/4–1980/1	115
5.4	A false dawn: the mining boom of the early 1980s	123
5.5	Recession and recovery: 1981/2–1983/4	124
5.6	Conclusion	128
 PART II: Sectors and product markets
6	Natural resource industries	133
	John W. Freebairn
6.1	The stylised facts	134
6.2	Analysis of the growth process	144
6.3	Intersectoral linkages	156
6.4	Conclusion	158
7	Tariffs and the manufacturing sector	165
	Kym Anderson
7.1	The development of manufacturing	166
7.2	The evolution of protection	175
7.3	Reasons for high protection levels to the 1970s	179
7.4	Reasons for protection cuts in the 1970s	187
7.5	Was the tariff a good thing for Australia?	189
8	The service sector	195
	Michael Carter
8.1	Economic development and structural change: the service economy	196
8.2	The service sector in the Australian economy	197
8.3	Selected service industries	209
8.4	Economic growth and structural change: a reassessment	217
8.5	Conclusion	224
 PART III: Input markets
9	Capital markets	229
	Matthew W. Butlin
9.1	The Australian capital market in 1900	229

9.2	The Australian capital market in 1980	231
9.3	The development of the capital market 1900–39	234
9.4	Further development and regulation 1939–80	241
9.5	Conclusion	245
10	Labour	248
	Glenn Withers
10.1	The legacy of the 1890s	249
10.2	The conciliation and arbitration system	250
10.3	Unions	254
10.4	Employment structure	257
10.5	Workforce characteristics	260
10.6	Labour market operation and performance	266
10.7	Conclusion	283
 PART IV: Government and economic welfare
11	Government	291
	Jonathan J. Pincus
11.1	Law and order	293
11.2	Fiscal measurements of government	295
11.3	Populate or perish	300
11.4	Sharing the burden	303
11.5	Postwar reconstruction	305
11.6	Federation in maturity	309
11.7	Public choice and private choice	313
12	Economic wellbeing	319
	Ian W. McLean
12.1	Concepts and hypotheses	320
12.2	Living standards	321
12.3	Economic inequality	330
12.4	Speculations	337
12.5	Conclusion	340
13	Epilogue: A comparative perspective	344
	Rodney Maddock and Ian W. McLean
13.1	Why did Australia do worse?	345
13.2	Conclusion	350
	Statistical appendix	353
1	Population and labour force 1900/1–1980/1	353
2	Prices and price indexes: deflators of the main expenditure aggregates 1900/1–1980/1	356

viii Contents

3	National income: main expenditure aggregates, current prices, 1900/1–1980/1	359
4	National income: main expenditure aggregates at constant 1966/7 prices, 1900/1–1980/1	362

	Index	365
--	--------------	-----