

THE POET'S VOICE
ESSAYS ON POETICS AND
GREEK LITERATURE

Simon Goldhill

Lecturer in Classics in the University of
Cambridge and Fellow of King's College

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge

New York Port Chester

Melbourne Sydney

Contents

Preface	page ix
1 The poet hero: language and representation in the Odyssey	I
Recognition	I
Naming and disguise	24
Telling a tale	36
The voice of the bard	56
2 Intimations of immortality: fame and tradition from Homer to Pindar	69
Critical exchanges	72
The revisionary gleam	93
Poetics and politics	108
The limits of praise and the praise of limits	128
3 Comic inversion and inverted commas: Aristophanes and parody	167
The contest of public voices	167
Carnival and licence	176
Speaking out	188
Purloining the poet's voice	201
4 Framing, polyphony and desire: Theocritus and Hellenistic poetics	223
The programmatic voice	225
The pastoral frame	246
The lover's voice: the subject of desire	261
Courting fame	272

5	The paradigms of epic: Apollonius Rhodius and the example of the past	284
	Back to the future	284
	Opening and closing the text: singing and signing	286
	Exemplarity (in brackets)	301
	The explanation of the past: aetiology and the human sciences	321
	Bibliography	334
	Index	363