

WOMEN'S LITERARY SALONS
AND POLITICAL PROPAGANDA
DURING THE NAPOLEONIC ERA
The Cradle of Patriotic Nationalism

Sharon Worley

With a Foreword by
G rard Gengembre

The Edwin Mellen Press
Lewiston•Queenston•Lampeter

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Illustrations	i
Foreword by Gérard Gengembre, PhD	v
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
Chapter 1 The Salon as a Political Arena and the Development of Germaine de Staël's Literary Theory	29
Chapter 2 Gendered Reconstruction of Feminist Authority in the Prince's Parlor: Historicism and Fiction in Stephanie Genlis' Royalist Politics Juliette Récamier and Prince Augustus of Prussia in Genlis's Athénaïs	67 98
Chapter 3 Hieroglyph and Symbol: Aesthetics and Morality in the Harmony of the Spheres The Estate as Icon and Allegory of the State: Literature, Art Collections, Public Monuments, and National Identity Classical Mythology and Christian Iconography as Moral Signifiers: The Estate and Art Collections	113 129 137
Chapter 4 The Apollonian Muse in Germaine de Staël's Corinne	175
Chapter 5 Italian Cultural Patrimony and Memories of Revolution: The Anti-Napoleonic Florence Salon of Louise Stolberg and Germaine de Staël's Corinne	207
Chapter 6 Germaine de Staël and Napoleon: Resistance in Antithesis Napoleon and the Cult of Empire	255 272
Chapter 7 Drama as Political Propaganda: De Staël's De l'Allemagne and the Heroic Archetype Romanticism as a Definition of German Character	295 346

Chapter 8
Ethical Aesthetics and National Identity in Dorothea Schlegel's Florentin	391
Cologne	408
Conclusion	479
Bibliography	481
Index	501