The Development of African American English

Walt Wolfram and Erik R. Thomas

In collaboration with
Elaine W. Green, Becky Childs,
Dan Beckett, and Benjamin Torbert

Blackwell
Publishers

Contents

List of Figures ix
List of Tables xi
Series Editor's Preface xii
Preface xiii

1 Introduction 1

1.1 The Status of African American English 1
1.2 A Unique Database 2
1.3 The Hyde County Corpus 5
1.4 Data Analysis 6
1.5 Beyond Hyde County 10

2 Issues in the Development of African American English 12

2.1 Hypotheses on Earlier African American English 12
2.2 Issues in Reconstructing Earlier AAVE 14
2.2.1 The nature of earlier written texts 15
2.2.2 Spoken language data representing earlier AAVE 18
2.2.3 The sociohistorical context of earlier African Americans 20
2.2.4 Variation in earlier AAVE 23
2.2.5 Donor source attribution 24
2.3 African American English in the Twentieth Century 27

3 Defining the Enclave Dialect Community 32

3.1 Introduction 32
3.2 Historically Isolated Speech Communities 33

3.2.1 Geography 34
3.2.2 Economy 35
3.2.3 Historical continuity 35
3.2.4 Social relations 36
3.2.5 Group identity 37
3.2.6 The social construction of enclave status 38
3.3 Language Change in Enclave Communities 40
3.4 Sociolinguistic Principles in the Configuration of Isolated Dialects 44

4 The Social History of Mainland Hyde County 47

4.1 Chesapeake Bay Origins 47
4.2 The Settlement of Hyde County 49
4.3 Hyde County from the Revolutionary War to the Civil War 54
4.4 Reconstruction to the Great Depression 59
4.5 Hyde County since 1940 62
4.6 Sociohistorical Effects on Language 64

5 Morphosyntactic Alignment in Hyde County English 66

5.1 Issues in Attribution 67
5.2 Past Tense be Regularization 69
5.2.1 The historical development of leveling to weren't 71
5.2.2 Was/weren't leveling in Hyde County 73
5.3 Copula/Auxiliary Is and Are Absence 77
5.3.1 The historical development of copula absence 78
5.3.2 Copula absence in Hyde County 80
5.4 Third Person -s Marking 83
5.4.1 The historical development of verbal -s marking 83
5.4.2 Verbal -s marking in Hyde County 85
5.5. Conclusion 89

6 Vocalic Alignment in Hyde County English 95

6.1 An Overview of Hyde County Vowels 96
6.2 The Historical Background of Hyde County Vowels 104
6.3 Quantitative Analysis of Hyde County Vowels 111
6.4 Conclusions 121

7 Consonantal Alignment in Hyde County English 125

7.1 Earlier Hyde County Consonants 126
7.2 The Case of Consonant Cluster Reduction 132
7.2.1 The patterning of cluster reduction 135
7.2.2 Explaining consonant cluster reduction patterns in Hyde County 138
7.3 The Case of Postvocalic r Vocalization 140
7.3.1 The patterning of postvocalic r-lessness 141
7.3.2 Post-/ð/ r vocalization 146
7.4 Conclusion 148

8 Intonational Alignment in Hyde County English 151

8.1 African American and European American Intonation 151
8.2 Analytical Methods 155
8.3 Results and Implications 156
8.4 Conclusions 159

9 The Individual and Group in Earlier African American English 160

9.1 The Individual and Group in Variation Studies 161
9.2 The Sample of Elderly African American Speakers 165
9.3 Some Diagnostic Variables 166
9.3.1 Rhoticity 167
9.3.2 Syllable-coda consonant cluster reduction 169
9.3.3 The vowel system 169
9.3.4 Verbal -s concord 171
9.3.5 Copula absence 172
9.3.6 Past tense be leveling 174
9.4 Patterns of Correlation and Individuation 175
9.5 Variation in Earlier AAVE 179

10 Beyond Hyde County: The Past and Present Development of AAVE 184

10.1 The Origin of African American English 184
10.2 The Regional Context of Earlier African American English 188
10.3 Levels of Linguistic Alignment 194

10.4 The Trajectory of Language Change 197
10.5 The Norming of AAVE 202
10.5.1 Issues in vernacular dialect norming 202
10.5.2 Vernacular language norming in Hyde County 205
10.5.3 Explaining the supraregional norms of contemporary AAVE 207
10.6 Conclusion 209

References 213
Index 232